MRS. GRAYSON'S PLANE UNABLE TO GET AWAY

THIRD U. P. CHURCH IS FORMALLY DEDICATED IN SERVICES SUNDAY

Magnificent New East Side Church Is Opened For Services.

Immense Crowds At Dedication—Dr. J. Knox Montgomery Makes Addresses.

A great organ pealed, fifteen hundred voices reverberated throughout the auditorium, and the new home of the Third United Presbyterian church was dedicated to Christian worship Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

Simple were the services which surrounded the dedication of this new church home, located on the corner of Adams and East Washington streets, the home that is the realization of the efforts of 27 years of striving.

Two preludes were played by the organist, there was an invocation, a responsive reading, a selection by a mixed quartet, a financial statement, the announcement of memorials, a service of dedication, a dedicatory prayer, and anthem, the sermon, by the Dr. J. Knox Montgomery, president of Muskingum college. After the offertory and benediction, the services were over, and a new church had been added to the realm of Christianity.

Channel Hoax Stirs London

Channel Swimming Hoax Causes Much Comment By London Newspapers

(International News Service)

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The impression was gaining ground here today that the channel swimming hoax admitted by Dr. Dorothy Logan, who received a prize, later returned, for supposedly breaking Gertrude Ederle's record, was nothing more than a "poor, mistimed joke."

It was believed her method would do nothing more than provoke further anti-feminist attacks.

While agreeing that some sort of channel swimming supervision was needed, London newspapers believe the fact should have been brought to the attention of the world by some other means than those adopted by Dr. Logan.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 17.—Outside of Notre Dame there isn't much to brag about in the papers today.

He must be arguing whether to put prohibition in their platform or not.

Ruth Elder, that dutiful and home-loving wife, says "save the lipstick first"—so the plane was lost.

Yours,

WILL.

Rescue Mission Day In Churches Notable Success

Immense Audiences At Mass Meetings In First M. E. Church.

FESTIVAL CHORAL SOCIETY APPEARS

Fund Of Approximately $9,000 Raised For Work Of Mission.

A great throng filled the First Methodist Episcopal church, crowding every seat and gathered about the altar rail, in the balcony and some were turned away when the mass meeting in the interest of the City Mission was held Sunday afternoon.

The Festival Choral society with 400 voices under the dirction of Paul Browne Patterson making its initial appearance, enthused the audience with an excellent musical program. Special selections were also rendered by Rev. G. A. Leichliter and Peter Quartel, while Rev. Leichliter brought an inspiring message in the interest of the mission.

Result is Pleasing.

R. A. McKinney, president of the mission board and all members of the board are very happy with the results of the 16th annual meeting of the mission. As a result of the appeal for the mission in the many different churches of the city E. J. Berquist superintendent of the mission says that at least $9,000 was secured for the work of the mission.

Mr. Berquist says that it was the best annual meeting since he became superintendent, and that the two mass meetings in the First Methodist church were well attended both afternoon and evening.

Dr. W. P. Felch head usher of the church, said that the afternoon meeting drew the largest crowd that he ever saw in the church. The evening congregation although not so large showed almost all available room taken.

Man Confesses Killing Woman

MOVE TO INDICT CONFESSED SLAYER

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The machinery of the law today moved swiftly to indict Harry Gilmore, 27, a meat cutter, who admitted to police he choked the woman he loved, the woman who left her husband for him.

Gilmore declared his sweetheart, Mrs. Helen Brandon, 26, mother of an eight-year-old boy, had made him her "love slave." She "lorded it over him." He brooded over the small "wrongs" she did him. Then came the tragic climax—death to the woman "I still love."

For years the nightmare of Gilmore's life had been the gleaming blade of a knife. A brawny figure six feet tall who handled knives every working day of his life—he shrank in horror from the implements of his trade and grew faint when a fellow worker cut his finger. His fear amounted to an obsession.

On Saturday the gleam of a knife flitted briefly before his enraged eyes. It was held by the woman he loved. Today he is in jail charged with murder. He confessed that he had strangled Mrs. Brandon when she flourished the dreaded weapon in his face. Gilmore also told police he was irritated by her laziness, her failure to wake him in time for his work, her demand for breakfast in bed, her refusal to iron and mend his clothes.

Gilmore said he met Mrs. Brandon at the World Series at Pittsburgh in 1925.

Airport Project Is Placed Before City Councilmen

Members Make Inspection Of Two Sites During Afternoon.

PROJECT PRESENTED BY COMMERCE BODY

Committee From Chamber Visits Council In Interest Of Airport Today.

Selection of an airport site for the city of New Castle took a step forward this afternoon when city councilmen investigated the advantages of two available sites.

One of the sites is north and the second is east of the city, both being within a distance of five miles of the city line. A Chamber of Commerce committee accompanied solons on their inspection tour.

Neither of the sites, each of which contains approximately 100 acres, will be purchased until council is instructed by the city's attorney that an appropriation for such a purpose is legal.

Should council decide to buy a site funds will be provided for when solons compile the budget for 1924, after which the deal would be consummated.

Urge Airport.

Council's tour this afternoon was caused when a Chamber of Commerce committee visited solons today. The committee consisted of David S. Pyle, Fred L. Rentz, Ira L. Ramsey and A. W. Chilton.

Acting as spokesman, President Pyle told of the Chamber of Commerce appointing a committee and making a study of more than two score possible airport locations.

He said the study was intensive and the committee decided finally that of the two score locations there were two which were outstanding in their advantages.

President Pyle next related the locations to members of city council and said the committee realized that it would be wise and proper to present the situation before council.

Pyle declared that 100 airports have been established recently throughout the United States and the committee would like to know if the city is interested in locating an airport here.

City Interested.

Councilman Genkinger, in behalf of members of city council, responded, stating that the Chamber of Commerce committee could rest assured that council is interested in such a proposition.

"The big question is whether or not we have a legal right to buy a site," said Councilman Burns, adding that even should this be possible the city could not do anything in a financial way this year.

The Chamber of Commerce president told council that the investigating committee had procured complete data relative to the two sites and reported the committee's recommendation.

My Pyle reported that the Chamber of Commerce investigating committee recommended the purchase of the northern site because it could be obtained for less money.

He said, however, that when Lieutenant Oakley Kelly had made his study from the air, Kelly had decided that the eastern site would prove

STRAIN TELLING ON ALBERT FALL

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil operator and sportsman, and Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, today went on trial in Justice Frederick Siddon's Supreme Court room, criminal division, on charges that they had criminally conspired to defraud the United States government of invaluable oil land.

They had the best legal talent that money can hire. Opposing counsel prepared for a long, drawn-out battle to select a jury. Available were 104 veniremen, comprising four panels, but as these are panels who have been assimilating court gossip for the past fifteen days it was quite likely that a special venire would have to be called before twelve men and women could be agreed upon.

As the courtroom was comparatively small, seats were at a premium. The corridors were cluttered with "trial fans" and prospective jurymen long before time for court to

Now a boy can be clothed without very much cost for a boy doesn't need things so much, just a suit now and then and a shirt and some socks and a hat and some collars and such. And about once a year if a boy's fitted out, well its over without much ado, but clothing a girl there's a nice piece of work, for it seems that a girl's never through. Silk stockings galore, and a boquet of hats and coats with a collar of fur, for a girl must be dressed to attract other eyes, and one can keep buying for her. No sooner she's fixed with a coat and a dress, and some gloves and a chic looking hat, than her father is socked for another long list, and his bank roll is constantly flat. Should Children Undergo Childhood's Ills?

A physician declares that "the old idea that children should have the common contagious diseases as early as possible in order to be through with them has no truth in it".

"On the contrary, children, especially very young children, should be shielded as carefully as possible from the common diseases of childhood, many of which may have disastrous consequences. Immunization, vaccination and isolation of the sick will do much to materially reduce the sickness and death rates of children."

The best plan for old or young is to keep free from all ills just as long as possible and to get the physician's help promptly if illness occurs.

PLANE IS FORCED TO LAND SHORTLY AFTER STARTING

and navigator Brice Goldsborough were going to drop into the sea off Prout's Neck. Stultz, however, was able to navigate the ship back towards the land. Enroute The Dawn seemed to sag toward the water despite the release of the big gasoline load.

Stultz finally landed "The Dawn" safely on the beach in front of Harry Jones' hangar. The Dawn took off at 9:31 a. m., and re-landed on the beach at 9:51.

"She was heavy by the nose," said Pilot Wilmer L. Stultz after landing back on the beach. "I couldn't hold her up. Her load was not equalized. She began losing speed. She dropped down to 80 miles an hour. Then she dropped down to 75 miles an hour. That's why I decided quickly to turn back."

Abandon Hop Until Tuesday

Old Orchard Beach, Me., — Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson, forced to turn back on her proposed non-stop flight to Copenhagen, Denmark, within ten minutes after the hop-off here today, has abandoned the idea of another take-off until low tide at eleven o'clock tomorrow morning.

The trans-Atlantic airplane "The Dawn," was down by the nose because of an unequalized gasoline supply, and Pilot Wilmer Stultz was forced to discharge 265 gallons of the 850 gallons supply when the plane, flying low to the water, failed to rise and was dropping down in speed.

Gasoline tanks were being refueled for another take-off within an hour when Stultz announced that it was impossible to get away in the present northwest wind, and Mrs. Grayson stated that if the wind was from the south or southeast she would hop tomorrow as weather conditions over the Atlantic were excellent.

The perfect landing of The Dawn with a load of 5500 pounds on the beach here was regarded as a remarkable demonstration of aviation skill on the part of Stultz, who was at the controls.

The protecting arm of Prout's Neck at the further end of the beach here probably saved "The Dawn" from a forced landing on the water, sheltering the airship from the wind. When "The Dawn" was three miles out, Pilot Stultz found he could not "get her up because she was down by the nose," as he expressed it.

Immediately after "The Dawn" landed safely on the beach, mechanics started the work of equalizing the load and replenishing the supply of gasoline. Thirty gallons of gasoline were removed from the gas tanks under the two motors and moved further back in the plane to give more weight to the tail.

Mrs. Grayson Stultz and Navigator Brice Goldsborough expressed keen disappointment over their forced return.

TWELVE FIREMEN ARE INJURED IN PITTSBURGH FIRE

The fire started on the fifth floor of a building occupied by William Perriman & Co., wholesale milliners and soon spread to the upper floors of adjoining structures.

Firemen announced the flames were under control shortly before daylight.

Flames Under Control

Flames were shooting from windows of the first building ignited when the firemen arrived. Soon smoke began to come from the building next door. There was a dull red glow, and the flames began to leap from the top of the building.

Additional fire alarms were sent in. Companies from all over the metropolitan district and some suburbs responded, and it was not long before historic Penn avenue was a mass of hose lines.

Crowds attracted to the scene of the blaze lined the boulevards on the hillsides watching the firemen in the most spectacular blaze here in recent years.

Besides the illumination from blaze, flood lights were turned on the burning buildings to aid firemen in fighting their way to the source of the blaze. The smoke was so dense in Penn avenue, it was almost impossible to see what was transpiring at the source of the flames.

Firemen took advantage of positions on adjacent building roofs, and poured streams of water into the burning buildings.

After the firemen first responded to the alarm, they fought for nearly an hour, only to find the blaze was gaining headway. Soon it was almost beyond control, and it was not until almost before dawn that the fighters were satisfied they had the flames in check.

Crowds going to work this morning saw the smoking ruins of the buildings. Police still maintained fire lines refusing to allow any to enter within a radius of 100 feet of the smouldering buildings.

List Of Injured

The injured, all firemen, were:

Capt. Harry O'Toole, fractured skull; condition critical.

Capt. W. H. Coslett, internal injuries, condition serious.

Capt. Thomas Miller, broken leg and arm and lacerations of the face and hands.

Deputy Fire Chief Frank Loxterman, shock and suffocation, serious.

Hoseman August F. Zelsure, broken collar bone.

Hoseman Joseph Gerneth, suffocation.

Capt. Frank Eccles, fractured ankle.

Hoseman E. Langbein, cuts and bruises.

Hoseman William E. Reilley, lacerated by flying glass.

Hoseman Joseph Horne, hands lacerated.

Motorcycle Patrolman Francis Flannery was cut about the hands.

Fall Shows Strain

Fall was showing his 66 years and the strain of a four-year battle for his freedom quite plainly. He looked far from well. Sinclair, on the other hand, was quite self-possessed, despite the three-month's jail sentence hanging over him for contempt of the senate.

Atlee Pomereme and Owen J. Roberts, special federal oil counsel, are charging that Sinclair diverted to Fall some $230,500 of the profits of the defunct Continental Trading company of Canada, in exchange for which Fall turned over to Sinclair the lease on Teapot Dome in the naval oil reserve. A week ago today, the Supreme Court of the United States confirmed a lower court decision voiding this lease on the ground it was "shot with fraud."

Martin W. Littleton, of New York, William E. Leahy and George Hoover, of Washington, and Mark Thompson, of New Mexico, are the lawyers who will defy the government to substantiate its case.

"There was nothing mysterious about the flight. It was simply this:— we left America, we flew 2,000 miles, and we encountered circumstances that compelled us to come down. We were rescued by the Dutch ship Barendrecht, and we were landed at Fayal. You know the rest. That is all there is to it."

The steamship, upon which Miss Elder will travel to the continent, is due to leave tonight. Miss Elder is anxious to get to Paris as quickly as possible.

VISION—AND NEW CASTLE

"A man may make money occasionally when those about him are not making money, but a man cannot make money regularly unless those about him are making money also. Prosperity, rightly understood, has reference to a community."

The late William Patterson, president of the National Bank of Lawrence County, also the late George Greer, had a vision of the future of New Castle. Their vision included the valley of the Shenango river, also the valley at the head of the Beaver river. It was principally through their influence that the steel mill, rod mill, wire nail mill and tin mills were built, also that Mahoningtown was annexed to the city as the seventh ward.

At that time manufacturers, merchants and bankers were all in harmony, all men in business stood together. They met, they considered, they planned for New Castle. They saw a vision of the city in the future and believed in it; had faith in it. The people of New Castle saw a vision. It drew them together, they had a common purpose, saw the same thing, had the same hope, were all of one mind.

The period between 1895 and 1905 was the most prosperous in the history of New Castle, due primarily to such men as Mr. William Patterson, Mr. George Greer, Mr. George W. Johnson and others.

They saw the Mahoning river and Youngstown on it—they saw the Shanango river, a stream of the same size, and New Castle on it—but they also saw New Castle was near the confluence of the two streams as to actually occupy and possess both as they pour their waters together to form the Beaver. At the head of the Beaver river they saw a great city, naturally a great industrial center, a location superior for manufacturing purposes to any other between the region of the Great Lakes and the Ohio valley.

What New Castle needs today is men of vision for its future developments, business men that will "Pull Together". We are no longer a one horse town, we are a growing city. Let us "Pull Together". A Chamber of Commerce is the parent civic organization of any community and without whole-hearted cooperation of its citizens, its achievements are handicapped.

Let us "Pull Together".

President, New Castle Chamber of Commerce.

the best for an airport field. Kelly did not study the northern site.

Legal, Chilton Says.

Mr. Pyle declared that committees are purchasing ground for airports and believes that a purchase made now or soon by the city will result in land being secured cheaper than in the future.

Mr. Rentz told council that owing to the dirt roads in the vicinity of the northern site it might be a good place which could be used by the mounted engineers located here.

Mr. Chilton, the commissioner of the chamber, addressed council, declaring that the law provides it is legal for the city to purchase a plot for airport purposes if the land is situated in the county.

"I am in favor of an airport field and I believe we should give it serious consideration," said Councilman Genkinger, adding however: "It is a matter of finance and the site desired."

Council to Decide.

President Pyle said that one of the sites can be leased and rented at a cost of $100 a month and said that aviation has so progressed the American Express company is soon to start air express service.

The matter was referred to committee and Solicitor Robert White instructed by Councilman Burns to present an opinion stating whether or not council can legally appropriate funds for an airport field.

Council then decided that the only way for them to decide which site would be best adapted was to view both sections and left on an inspection tour this afternoon.

FARM OUTLOOK IMPROVES

HIGHER prices for farm products, due to several short crops, have made the agricultural outlook considerably more favorable this year than in 1926.

This is revealed in the Federal Reserve Board bulletin for October, which states that the famers have been able to liquidate some of their loans and are less dependent upon banks for credit than they were last year.

Two important factors in this situation are the cotton crop, which is estimated at more than 5,000,000 bales below last year's output, and the corn yield, which may be 200,000,000 bushels less than a year ago. Due, perhaps, to the upward trend stimulated by these shortages, wheat prices are now at about the same level as last fall, although the wheat crop is estimated at about 30,000,000 bushels above that of 1926.

Higher prices for hogs and dairy products also contribute to the general improvement in the farm situation, says the Public Ledger. This balancing of the farm outlook and the higher marketing level provide some compensation for the floods and unseasonable weather of last spring and summer.

CHECKS AN AID TO THRIFT

THE check system of paying employes is becoming increasingly popular throughout this country. Large firms have adopted it for several reasons, chief among which is the fact that check payments foil the payroll bandit and cure employes of "bank fright." With minor exceptions, no objection is made by wage earners to the check system.

Paying salaries and wages by check should be the rule rather than the exception, yet it is difficult to break away from a tradition as old and well established as the pay envelope. The wage earner likes to have the feel of money in his pocket, a sensation which a check cannot gratify.

The handling of large sums of money, such as those passing through the cashier's office of any industrial plant on payday, is always attended with risk. Universal use of the check system would save hundreds of thousands of dollars and scores of lives and take temptation out of the road of those who are led by the promise of sudden wealth to risk their own lives and liberty and the lives of others.

WEATHER TONICS

"CHANGEABLE weather is beneficial to health rather than otherwise," says a health officer in a city noted for its variability of temperature, humidity and sunshine. "It acts as a tonic to the whole system. Air baths are just as necessary as water baths, and the change does a tremendous amount of good."

The people subject to such changes seldom seem to show much evidence of pleasure in them, any more than do people tossed suddenly into cold or hot baths. They complain of the cold in the winter and the heat in the summer and the variability between times, and wish they could have "decent, dependable weather" more of the time. Yet it does appear, not merely from expert testimony but from the sickness and mortality figures, that in some mysterious way people are benefited by weather characterized by rather violent changes.

It may be, as some cynic observes, that this benefit comes from killing off the weaklings, thus developing a hardy and resistant stock, but it seems more likely that the variability really operates as a tonic, as the health officer suggests. The human victims, too, usually get a surprising amount of effective work done, when one considers the amount of time and attention occupied in changing their clothing to endure the weather.

Service: The fancy touch, furnished free, that makes the bill 10 per cent larger.

The average man needs twelve suits of clothes, a master tailors' association alleges. This is a reduction from the former trade estimate of forty suits, and yet the average man who bought twelve suits would be safe in ordering them without pockets.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE WOMAN BARKER AT THE FAIR

She was plainly very tired, she was plainly very hoarse,
And I wondered how it happened life had taken such a course.
Oh, what curious prank of fate,
Set a woman barking there,
At a side show's narrow gate,
Selling tickets at a fair?
In the blazing sun she sat, like a statue gray with grime,
And the burden of her cry to the crowd was "just a dime!"

"It's a sorry life," thought I, "for a woman day by day,
To be shouting to the throng for their dimes in such a way,
And to move from place to place
Knowing neither home nor friends
Peace nor mirth nor touch of grace,
On which happiness depends."
So I lingered till the crowd left me standing there alone,
And I smiled and spoke to her just to make my pity known.

"I don't understand," said I, "how you brave this constant din,
Dust and heat and jesting coarse just to get a few dimes in.
Surely this is not a task
That a woman ought to do;
Out of pity now I ask
How this hardship came to you?"
Then she wiped her sticky brow, powdered fresh her features red,
"It's a swell life trouping round, and I like it, kid!" she said.

In Day's News

The death of Brig. Gen. Henry L. Abbott of Boston has left Gen. Adelbert Ames the oldest living graduate of West Point. Gen. Ames was born in Rockland, Me., ninety-two years ago this month. After the civil war he was an active participant in reconstruction politics. In 1870 he was elected U. S. Senator from Mississippi and three years later he became Provisional Governor of that State. His subsequent career in the South was stormy. Trouble arising in State elections, he called upon the Government for troops, but was refused. Thereupon he organized a State militia among the negroes. At this the while population rose in open rebellion. In 1876 Gov. Ames was impeached and returned to the North. In the Spanish war he served conspicuously in the Santiago campaign. In recent years he has made his home in Massachusetts.

Hints and Dints

Sun sets tonight 5:17. Sun rises tomorrow 6:14.

The worse the weather the better it is for football it seems. Farmers have to have good weather for their activities however.

It takes more than the curfew to separate the flappers from the bobbed hair grandmothers.

We have noticed that some people are not content to stay on their side of the counter but have to get in behind it when they want service. That kind should get the worst kind as it interferes with the operation of the place, but some people want favoritism.

We have noticed that when most women carry umbrellas they carry them under their arms and let the end stick out behind them to jab any one who is unfortunate enought to come up behind them.

An epidemic of ocean flying is again on. The sharks and other kinds of man and woman eating animals or whatever they are, are whetting their appetites for a nice tender morsel or two.

Every girl reaches the age when she imagines to make a good husband a man must have a sport roadster and a collge fraternity pin.

President Coolidge refuses to talk politics in spite of the fact that all Americans would rather have him talk that kind of stuff than any other person in this country. He really could say more interesting things than any other person if he wanted to. He looks tired.

Automibile tourists with the aid of a road map used to be able to get along without asking questions in towns they passed through. But that was before prohibition.

Do not forget now that New Castle is a convention city and the town will be known by what visitors see and hear.

We certainly got a running start as a convention city with about three thousand visitors at the first convention which was the State Sabbath school gathering last week. It also paid the business men big according to what we hear.

The police force of New Castle did itself proud last week during the Sabbath School convention. We heard a great number of the visitors tell about the nice things the policemen did for them. The officers stationed around the Cathedral certainly put in some efficient and satisfactory service.

The man who says he does not like to have people say nice things about him evidently is the kind that never hears very much nice about himself. A real human likes to hear nice things about himself and we say this inspite of assertions to the contrary. We do anyhow and we are not fishing.

The potato crop is reported short this year. This in spite of all the fat ladies cutting out potatoes as an eating dish. Those who do not eat them will save some money anyhow.

In Paris those who want to do their advertising on the streets must pay a high tax. This tax has been increased or rather multiplied 40 times. This is good because advertising should be done in newspapers and people buy newspapers just to see the advertising. Street advertising is money wasted anywhere.

Sometimes is seems the matches made in Sweden were also made to light only in that country.

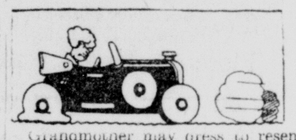
From what one hears about Jack Dempsey's wonderful teeth you would think he was going to fight dogs.

Does This "Bore" You?

Bill had a bill board. Bill also had a board bill. The board bill bored Bill so that Bill sold the bill board to pay his board bill. So after Bill sold his bill board to pay board bill the board bill no longer bored Bill.

There now pay your assessment and don't bore the financier, then should you die your loved ones will have the wherewithal to pay their board bill.

By the way do you know of anything that will bring several thousand men out into a parade other that a Sunday school parade. Neither do we.



Grandmother may dress to resemble a flapper, but you'll notice that nobody stops to fix a puncture for her.

A NICE LETTER

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 14, 1927.

Mr. Rentz,
New Castle.

Dear Mr. Rentz:

I want to say a few words through your paper for New Castle. I moved from New Castle 10 years ago after having lived there eight years, and it is a rare treat to get back for a few hours. I was at the Sabbath school convention, and it is about that I want to speak.

New Castle knows how to do things right, especially when it comes to entertaining a convention. The hospitality of the people knows no bounds.

Mr. P. L. Craig sure did know his man when he picked Mr. Rentz to look after the transporting of the people. I was met at the station and taken to the temple and brought back again to the station in a swell Packard car without any expense. Did not have to ask to be taken to the different places, and right here I want to speak a word for the Boy Scouts. They were sure on the job, even through all the rain they stayed right at their place of duty.

Every person in town seemed to be wanting to do all they could to make the delegates at home and enjoy the stay in New Castle. I want to congratulate you on the wonderful new hotel you have. It sure is a credit to New Castle, and the way they took care of the delegates could not be improved on.

I am glad to have a friend in the person of Mr. P. L. Craig, a man who made the closing convention the greatest ever held.

There is only one New Castle, and it has the best bunch of people per square foot of any place in the U. S.

Again congratulating all who helped to make the convention the great success that it was, I am,

Yours truly,
T. W. MONTGOMERY,
305 Commonwealth Bldg.,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

A man isn't so easily driven to drink now. But he can do some other fool thing to make the woman feel bad.

Its strange that the letters of praise a person gets always come from sensible people and the letters of criticism from idiots.

International athletic contests have been proposed as an aid to world peace. This would be reasonable if somebody would invent a contest which both sides could win.

With energy and capacity many a man succeeds without education and without these qualities education is almost useless.

And now we hear that the chemists are to make the dollar last. It has been a long time since we have heard anything quite as sensible on the part of the chemists and we hope they are able to make the dollar last at least twice as long.

The old man is the head of the family so he is naturally the one who gets the headaches.

Perhaps the automibile is ruining the younger generation. It is only in retaliation for the younger generation ruining a lot of automobiles.

Remus the bootleg king of Cincinnati who shot and killed his wife says he want a jury of women to try him for murder. Remus might change his mind after he gets in court. So far as we are concerned his reasons for the murder are mighty silly and that be committed a premeditated crime. But then we're not in Cincinnati so we are not afraid to express our opinion.

President Coolidge at the home of R. B. Mellon in Pittsburgh Thursday at a breakfast of bacon and eggs. That is a good Yankee breakfast all right. You know, some say if you know what a man eats you know the kind of a man he is. A president who can enjoy bacon and eggs couldn't help but be solid and substantial.

At the international meeting of the Bartenders' association held in Geneva Switzerland the American members were only permitted to look on and were not considered real active members. That is quite a come down for the former suds slingers but it can't be helped. But when the bootleggers hold their convention the barkeeps will look on with envy.

Paris has started a movement to charge shopkeepers for sidewalk advertising and well they should. If painting signs on the sidewalk gets business those who do it should pay the price for the space they use. And in addition to the cost of it those who so deface the walks should be made to clean them and keep them clean.

A local man in trying to kid his wife asked her: "Now just what were the dresses like ten years ago?" But the answer he got held him for she said: "Like Mine."

The occupation of a Youngstown, O., father was listed on a baby's birth certificate as a "drunken loafer" by its mother. That is a fine inheritance for a baby in this day and age.

The other day we saw a big husky man pan handle a good scout for the price of a breakfast. It so happened that the man addressed had some work to do and was looking for a man to do it but the hunghy bird wouldn't do the work, not him. No he wanted something to eat and didn't want work. Birds like that ought to be let get so hungry that work will be a pleasure to them.

The Mexican senate passed a bill to increase the term of the president from four to six years. Perhaps they are thinking of postponing the revolution at least two years longer.

The banks and postoffices are still conducting filling stations for fountain pens.

The next state Sabbath school convention will be held next year in Philadelphia. It was frankly stated here last week that that great city could not furnish a building to equal the Scottish Rite Cathedral, because there is no such wonderful building in that city. New Castle sure did put it over.

The Sunday school delegates who did get into The Castleton praised it to the skies. The hotel really is not open yet, so what will people do in the way of praise for it when it really gets going right. It is going to be great.

Drunken automobile drivers are a menace to the safety of the highways and no mercy should be shown those found driving cars while piflicated.

In the automobile salesroom is about the only place one ever hears about a motor car going 30 miles on a gallon.

Coaches get more than professors for the same reason that diamonds cost more than coal. There's lots of coal

Worms and the Rich Men.
Much About Wives.
Two Unusual Items.
Two Good Decisions.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE
(Copyright, 1927, By N. Y. American, Inc.

President Coolidge, eulogizing America's great industries, says: "The rattle of the reaper, the buzz of the saw, the clang of the anvil, the roar of traffic are all part of a mighty symphony, not only of material but of spiritual progress."

There has been improvement since Pharoah built the great pyramid and since Saint James wrote his bitter denuciation, "Go to now, yet rich men weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you."

Payrolls are regular and bigger. Scarcity of labor makes employers realize the value of men as well as machinery. Public opinion has helped and some employers plan to make workers happy, for the sake of making them happy, not merely because it pays.

But the millennium is not here. The average great industrialist thinks of his men as he thinks of other machines. He owes that to his stockholders. If a rich man proved that to make 100,000 men independently well off would please him more than making $100,000,000 for himself, he would be classed among "cranks," as were those that freed their slaves before Lincoln.

Fortunately civilization is a steady growth and decency grows with it. A baby's empty mouth grows a full set of teeth, no thanks to the baby. And our industrial feudalism, safer, richer, more intelligent than the military feudalism it replaces conditions, no thanks to individuals.

About their real work, they know and care as little as the tiny creatures that built the coral islands, or worms that chewing and wriggling in utter selfishness produced the fertile soil. But that is no reason for refusing gratitude to those worms.

Virtuous, mildly rebellious wives of Chicopee, Mass., prepared ten commandments for husbands and show that they do not understand the problem of husbands or marriage. It is useless to talk about details, including the double standard of morals.

The problem is in two words, SYMPATHY AND JUSTICE.

If a man is sympathetic and just, he will try to do what he ought to do. His success will depend on his age and his degree of semi-civilization.

Men, once as imperfect as the higher apes, are slowly improving, and marriage is their training school. Wives know it, and prepare their matrimorial decalougues chiefly for amusement.

It interests them to think what a husband might be, if he were not what he is.

Nearer reality is the "husband calling contest." At the Suffolk, Va., fair prizes were offered for wives that could call their husbands, with a voice endearing and audible from afar.

The wife, combining endearment with extreme radius, was to be crowned queen of husband callers. Unregenerate husbands will shudder at the thought of that penetrating, endearing call.

Wives have been engaged in that husband calling contest for 500,000 years, first to get him, then to keep him.

Their patience throughout the ages is amazing, the smallness of their reward pathetic.

Two unusual news items:

A clergyman kills himself. No need to print his unfortunate name.

A young woman is caught stealing to get money to buy tombstones for her mother and sister.

That clergyman struggle on as they do, many poor and neglected in old age, is a tribute to their courage and a disgrace to men.

That the young woman should steal to buy tombstones is a reflection on her common sense.

The Angel Gabriel is amazingly accurate, in memoranda. There is no possibility of his forgetting or mistaking anyone even though buried in the sea. Besides, science proves that the earth and men on it will last at least one hundred million years longer. No tombstones could outlive that period.

Thousands of poor widows and daughters, by the way, rob and impoverish themselves to provide tombstones and elaborate funerals for husbands and fathers that never did much for them.

The poorer families suffer most in this way, and clergymen should discourage regardless of sexton's protests.

Two legal decisions of interest:

A Pennsylvania judge decides that husbands cannot escape alimony by getting divorces in Nevada or elsewhere, on favorable terms. The home town judge will decide what the lady should have.

A Federal judge says the owner is responsible if his building falls in an earthquake or hurricane and it can be shown that it was not properly built. Hitherto it has been the custom to blame the Almighty and call it "an act of God," as your British steamship ticket tells you the company is "not responsible for acts of God, or kings' enemies."

The judge says if you build badly and kill people, you, and not God, will be responsible.

Dr. Crane's Editorial

NEWSPAPERS AND INTERNATIONALISM

Herr Stressemann, a German statesman, said not long ago at the Geneva conference that he hoped that newspaper men would collaborate with politicians to achieve a smoother running of international affairs.

Sir Austen Chamberlain also referred to the press conference resolution which appealed to the world press to contribute to the consolidation of peace by combating hatreds between nationalities and thus prepare for moral disarmament. He declared that "the collaboration of the press in such a work is of equal consequence, and may be even of greater influence than anything statesmen can do."

As a rule I don't think much of a policy of a paper. They ought to print the straight news without reference to a policy and tell us what happens, whether it bears out their conviction of what ought to happen or not.

But there is one policy every newspaper ought to have. It ought to do everything in its power to eliminate the causes of war. It should carefully and even prayerfully ask itself what causes war and put the soft pedal on that.

The ultimate cause of all wars is an inflamed and erroneous public opinion. Without favorable public opinion wars would cease, and the newspaper has as much to do with making public opinion as almost any other influence.

There ought therefore to dominate the editors of every newspaper the idea that they will stress those things that make for peace and harmony and decry whatever makes for trouble. War is an expensive and fallacious idea and every newspaper ought to work against it.

War will never be outlawed by congresses or statesmen, but by becoming unpopular with the masses.

To accomplish business there must be continual compromise. The idea that one nation is always right is erroneous. As Herr Stressmann says, "Compromise is not a sign of feebleness, but of wisdom."

No nation should think more highly of itself than it ought to think, for international egotism is one of the most fruitful causes of war.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

THE BUILDERS EXALTED

On the afternoon of September 22nd at precisely two o'clock on schedule time, the Spirit of St. Louis gracefully dipped from the air to the runway of the Mahoney Flying Field in San Diego, and taxied up to the open doors of the factory which had produced it. It was the same field from which that half of "WE" took off on that seemingly far distant May morning to make flying history, and to exalt the other half of "WE" to a position which few mortals have ever attained on this earth.

All who saw the return of the Spirit of St. Louis and its pilot to the air dome felt a lump rise in their throats. They could not help it. The first man to greet Colonel Lindbergh when he alighted on that afternoon was B. F. Mahoney, the man who told Lindbergh when he was looking for a builder of a ship that he could build him one in sixty days, and who did. It was very fitting that at the dinner given that evening to Lindbergh at the Hotel del Coronado that at the speaker's table in company with all the Admirals, both Rear and Fore, there were seated the builders of that plane. Donald Hall, the designer of the plane, W. H. Boles, who superintended the construction of it, and Mahoney himself, the builder of the Spirit of St. Louis. No prouder persons sat there than these men. They made the great flight possible. Lindbergh himself in his address that evening said.

"The ship was constructed, and tested almost exactly sixty days after the order was placed. I don't know of any other place where such a feat would have been possible, and I am in a position to speak, for I looked around a lot before I placed the order. The engineering problems were great. The previous distance record of an airship was about 3300 miles, made with a motor of higher horse power, a plane of much more expensive construction and design, yet sixty days after the order was placed, the plane was taken to Camp Kearney, and tested for its load. It was one of the few times of record that the performance was up to the theoretical plans. I may say that the performance of the plane has surpassed the theoretical performance."

"After We left San Diego and St. Louis, the plane was inspected in New York, and it was not necessary to make any real changes. It was in almost exactly the same condition as when it left San Diego. It reached Paris the same way. It was necessary there to recover part of the rear of the fuselage, but that was not due to faulty construction. It seems that there were some souvenir hunters in Paris, but I do not think they were all Parisians, for I have seen since my return to this country, pieces of silver cloth marked 'Spirit of St. Louis'."

"The plane has now traveled nearly 25,000 miles, and is still practically in its original condition. It is in excellent shape. The motor, which was of course not built in San Diego, has not yet been overhauled, and it is still in its original condition after 270 and some odd hours in the air. The condition of this ship indicates the present state to which the building of aircraft for commercial aviation has reached."

As was said in this column at the time Charles A. Lindbergh landed at Le Bourget, the constructor of the plane should not be forgotten, and the national hero has not forgotten him—Benjamin Franklin Mahoney.

THINKING AROUND THE WORLD

Maybe I have told you before that I consider Aldous Huxley the best writer of English who is now living and writing. Huxley is one writer who never does anything sloppily. It must be that money does not greatly tempt him. Most of the very good writers of today occasionally indulge in hurried and second-rate writing in between their really good books. The examples of this kind of work are too numerous to cite. Besides, I really can't think of another writer of English whom I'd care to cite in the same paragraph in which I'm talking about Huxley.

I have just finished reading Huxley's "Jesting Pilate", which a good friend gave me last Christmas. Once I got into that book, I realized, with much alarm, that I'd been wasting my time ever since last Christmas, doing necessary things, instead of reading "Jesting Pilate".

Huxley took a rather leisurely trip around the world, or more or less around it, and this book is his travel book. But it isn't like any other travel book I ever read. Huxley doesn't walk you around the world. He doesn't fly you around, or even haul you around with him on a steamboat.

Huxley just thinks around the world, and you may go along if you care to follow his interesting trains of thought.

When Huxley rides an elephant in India, he forgets to tell you much about what he saw. He doesn't tell you exactly what everybody said to everybody else. He doesn't moralize about how well or how ill the Indians are treated. He just thinks aloud, and sets down his thoughts.

So little thinking is done in these days of fast motor cars and flickering pictures, that it is a joy to take an intellectual holiday with Mr. Huxley and watch the workings of a well-trained mind.

It surprises me a little to learn that Mr. Huxley does not greatly admire the Taj Mahal, the great mausoleum of Agra, India. I have always heard this building praised as one of the most beautiful objects ever constucted by man.

But Huxley says it's rather second-rate. Well, I've never seen the Taj Mahal, but I'll wager Huxley is right.

MANY WOMEN HAVE TOXEMIA

And Don't Know It! When your system is poisoned, due to retention of waste matter in bowels—doctors call it "toxaemia." Symptoms are nervousness, headaches, body pains, irritability, lack of ambition and languidness. Any one symptom is Nature's cry to drive out the poisonous wastes that cause Toxemia. Neglect is dangerous! Take Partola, in antiseptic, mint-flavored laxative tablets, at night. Eliminates poisonous wastes, stimulates digestion, leaves you bright-eyed, radiantly healthy. Now Read What 11,105* Doctors say About Lucky Strike Cigarettes Because

"It's toasted"

WHAT is the quality that Giacomo Rimini, Margaret D'Alvarez, Cesare Formichi, Armand Tokatyan, Emma Trentini, William Faversham, Florence Reed, Paul Whiteman, and other famous singers, actors, broadcasters and public speakers have found that makes LUCKY STRIKES delightful and of no possible injury to their voices?

For the answer we turned to medical men and asked them this question:

Do you think from your experience with LUCKY STRIKE cigarettes that they are less irritating to sensitive or tender throats than other cigarettes, whatever the reason?

11,105* doctors answered this question "YES."

Consider what these figures mean: consider that they represent the opinion and experience of doctors, those whose business it is to know.

Paul Whiteman, Noted Orchestra Leader, writes:

"It was but recently, when I started to act as master of ceremonies with my band at the Paramount Theatre, that I realized how vital perfect voice condition was to a performer. I have always been a consistent smoker and, fortunately, Lucky Strikes were my favorite brand. I like their toasted flavor and, best of all, I can smoke as often as I like, without fear of irritating my voice, which is becoming a great asset in my work."

The Daybook OF A New Yorker

BY BURTON RASCOE

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to New Castle News.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Twenty years ago, the august gentlemen who govern such affairs, decided to erect a suitable county courthouse. The building has been under construction throughout that period up until it was finished about six months ago. It cost the local taxpayers about 33 million dollars. Certainly, then, one would think that such a place should be an example of the utmost perfection. And on most counts it is.

Yet after one mounts the impressive staircase, and enters the lobby, one is faced with two enormous and elaborately decorated clocks, on either side of the entrance. When these ornamental timepieces were first set in they ran correctly—at least for three days. But from that time on they have been disagreeing. The clock on the left hand side is usually nearer the correct time than its twin on the right. They are usually about two hours apart.

Obviously, this deficiency causes a great deal of trouble in the building. A lawyer enters, in haste, to be on time for a case he is about to handle. He looks at the clocks, which informs him that he has 20 minutes to wait. Upstairs, his case is actually being called. And the queer thing about this item is, that so far as I know, there has been not a single complaint about the clocks nor do those in charge seem to know that they are out of order. Knowing the ways of public buildings in this town as I do, I venture the guess that the clocks will go on being wrong until the building is torn down.

Recently, I watched a boy performing a novel brand of scull-duggery in City Hall park. This happens to be one of the most popular rendezvous in the city for pigeons and the boy was fully aware of this, for he came well prepared. Under his arm, he carried a large basket, in which, as I observed, pigeons were packed together. The lad proceeded to the wall of the city hall itself, and waited until a large number of wild pigeons had collected on the cornices above. Then with quick gestures, he sprayed the pigeons in the basket with a small atomizer. As I was standing fairly close, I recognized the odor of anise, an oil that is most attractive to pigeons.

Thereupon he released the pigeons in his basket. They swooped up above the cornices, carrying with them in their flight several of the wild birds. It is a well known fact, that birds, as well as humans are attracted to flocks. The collection of pigeons, following a wide arc returned to the boy below—and entered the basket. He closed it and with no further adoo, headed for the subway, richer by several good birds for a few minutes of intelligent labor.

Strange as it may seem, actors and actresses in the audience are the most annoying of the late comers on opening nights at the theatre. When they are on holiday they go to a show, like the postman who goes on a hike and the literary critic who, on holiday, reads a book. They always have friends in the audience, over whom they gush especially if they are actresses getting on in years. Some sections of the orchestra of a theatre on an opening night is like a home-coming half through the first act.

Light from sources within the ordinary range of vision, therefore, must be broken and diffused as to be turned from light rays into light glow.

Light rays must not only be prevented from shining directly from source to eye; they must not be allowed to fall on walls, desks, pages of book or other brilliant surface and to reflect into the eyes in glare. This is a wide-spread fault in artificial lighting, and it is said to be more injurious than direct light rays, because it is more insidious and ... not so quickly influence.

Defective Vision

Government investigations have found that approximately 25% to 30% of the children in the public schools have defective vision, and the alarming fact is that this percentage increases with grade progress through the schools. The Government has published quite a large pamphlet, "The Eyesight of School Children," treating on this condition. It cites as one of the principle causes the poor lighting by which children read, write, study and do their lessons at home. Even adults' eyes are affected in the same way, although there are no places like schools in which to gather statistics.

The First United Presbyterian Church

October 15, '27.

Mr. George W. Conway,
Editor, The New Castle News,
New Castle, Pa.
Dear Mr. Conway:

I wish to congratulate you on the fine way in which your paper handled the recent Pennsylvania State Sabbath School convention. That was one of the finest pieces of journalism I have seen for a long time. New Castle may well feel proud of a paper such as yours, and I can believe that President Craig was not exaggerating in his commendation of the fine character of The News.

I wish also to add a word of appreciation of the splendid way in which the large crowd was taken care of in your city. The entire affair was a fine example of genuine hospitality, and the fine Cathedral is an ideal place for such gatherings.

Hoping New Castle may again be host to such a splendid group of S. S. workers, I am,

Very Sincerely,
W. FRANKLIN HARKEY.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

The Way of the World

TEACHING THE JOBLESS

Somebody in Manchester, England, has vision. That great industrial city maintains a Juvenile Center. If a boy has left school and applies for work and finds there is no work, he is turned over to the Juvenile Center. He is put to school and his education is continued until he finds work. He is kept occupied in various ways to improve himself until something definite and permanent is found for him to do.

CHILDREN IMPROVING

Children today are constantly being compared with their grandfathers and grandmothers. As far as brains go they needn't fear the comparison. A group of Chicago pupils passed an arithmetic test that was given 50 years ago. And the marks of today's youngsters were 20 percent higher than grandpa and grandma got. When the test was given in 1875 only 3 percent got perfect results. Today 15 percent were perfect.

UP TO THE MAN

Some time ago an eastern man went to Reno and sought a divorce on the ground that his wife cared too much for politics. She told him a political career meant more to her than her husband. Can't blame the wife for that. A husband who isn't more interesting to his wife than politics has only himself to blame. In this day of economic independence for women—when women don't need men—they have a right to expect their husbands to be entertaining. A dull husband ought to be fired.

TO BE STILL

The Pennsylvania judge who sentenced a woman to silence had a big idea. After listening to her uninterrupted barrage in court for five minutes, he told her to go home and sit in silence for an hour each evening. That would be a helpful practice for all of us. For at least one hour we should be certain of not saying anything foolish—and we might manage to think a little.

BETTING ON YOURSELF

"Insist on yourself," said Emerson. "Never imitate. Your own gift you can present every moment with the cumulative force of a whole life's cultivation; but of the adopted talent of another you have only an extemporaneous, half possession."

If you are a public speaker remember that an audience is vastly more impressed to hear you giving something you have thought out for yourself than it is to hear you repeating the words of another, no matter how beautifully you do it. It is true in a wider field than the field of public speaking. When you feel that you are prepared for a certain kind of work, do it your way, and make a mental bet on your own ability.

The French government will spend $2,600,000 on its proposed dam and hydro-electric plant at Kembs Falls on the Rhine, and will include a navigable canal in the project.

Eggs sent from China 50 years ago were served at a recent banquet of the Zoological Society of Ireland, and the members pronounced the flavor of the ancient hen fruit delicious.

WOMEN CAN NOW DO MORE

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Keeps Them Well

Fifty years ago there were few occupations for women. Some taught school, some did housework, some found work to do at home and a few took up nursing.

Today there are very few occupations not open to women. Today they work in great factories with hundreds of other women and girls. There are also women architects, lawyers, dentists, executives, and legislators. But all too often a woman wins her economic independence at the cost of her health.

Mrs. Elizabeth Chamberlain who works in the Unionall factory making overalls writes that she got "wonderful results" from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Chamberlain lives at 500 Monmouth St., Trenton, N. J. She recommends the Vegetable Compound to her friends in the factory and will gladly answer any letters she gets from women asking about it.

"New Castle's Heart Is In the Work!"

New Castle First

When Man first gave of his sustenance to another less fortunate, he lighted the first spark of Civilization. As more men have followed that first example, SOCIAL LIFE HAS IMPROVED.

New Castle First

Some men have given because of fear; some because of Superstition. But there is little progress in that. When Men give to HELP OTHERS thereby incidentally helping themselves, real Progress results. Giving, like acquiring, requires intelligent effort and systematic planning.

New Castle First

New Castle citizens once were assailed by ten seperate campaigns for money. All worthy, but often haphazardly handled, each requiring separate organization expense and valuable time.

Some succeeded well—others fared poorly. Sometimes the most needy failed utterly. The community profited by those that succeeded; but it suffered, far more, from those that failed.

New Castle First

All these ten campaigns are now co-ordinated into ONE BIG CAMPAIGN. Each organization is intelligently budgeted and ALL lend their UNITED efforts to secure the amount NECESSARY to supply the required budgets of each agency.

New Castle First

New Castle has her minimum requirements. We are a growing city and each agency has added burdens. Many additional demands are being made on their already limited resources and facilities. Let's establish our own MAXIMUM by subscribing liberally.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

BY MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

A supper or dinner for a cold day which is as simple as possible is suggested here. Celery may be used to add crispness to the meal instead of the cabbage or lettuce.

Ham cooked with Green Beans, Corn and Potatoes
Celery or Lettuce or Cabbage Salad
Apple Dumplings Milk
Coffee

TODAY'S RECIPES

Ham Cooked With Beans—Prepare two pounds of fresh green beans, put in cooker with a thick slice of ham, add two cups of water, salt and pepper, and cook an hour, add as many small potatoes as desired and cook another three-quarters of an hour, now add four large ears of sweet corn, cut from cob, a little more salt and pepper and cook about 15 minutes.

Apple Dumplings—Prepare as many apples as you want dumplings by peeling and removing core, leaving apple whole. Now make a rich biscuit dough, roll one-half inch thick, cut in squares large enough to wrap apple. Put an apple in center of each square, fill center of apple with sugar and a grating of nutmeg, wrap and place in well greased baking pan. Bake. When dumplings have begun to brown, remove pan from oven, sprinkle around dumplings, one cup of sugar and one-fourth cup of butter, add enough water to make a syrup as dumplings finish baking, return to oven and bake until apples are done. Serve with plenty of whole milk.

Ramikins—French for individual baking dishes.

SUGGESTIONS

Candied Peaches.

This is a delicious way to use peaches. Wash and halve, remove stones but do not peel. Place in a frying pan, cut side up and fill cavities generously with butter and sugar. Put just a film of water over the bottom of the pan. Cover and simmer till peaches are soft from the steam. Remove the cover and turn peaches cut side down. Cook until the cut surface is a delicate brown. Put on a platter and pour remaining syrup over the peaches. (Add a little water if syrup is too thick.) Serve hot with the meat course.

Ton Litter Club Led By Mercer County Man

One of the leaders in the 1927 Keystone Ton Litters Club is L. D. Elliott of near Cochranton, who is one of the first to produce over one-and one-half tons of pork per litter in 180 days according to a report issued by L. C. Madison, swine extension specialist of the Pennsylvania State College.

Elliott fed 13 pigs sired by a purebred Berkshire boar to weigh 3027.5 pounds at six months of age. The heaviest pig in the lot tipped the scales at 250.5 pounds while the lightest weighed 209.5 pounds. Elliotts feed cost was $246.45. Figuring his pigs at 12 cents a pound, market price on weighing day, their value was 363.30 or a profit of $116.85 over feed cost.

Two Trees To Be Planted On Public Square Tuesday, In Her Honor

Tuesday afternoon, October 18, at 2:00 o'clock, a most unusual exercise will take place on the public square when two trees will be planted as a testimonial of the Federation of Women's Clubs to the woman who for the past 12 years has served as president of the Federation, Mrs. Charles Greer.

Men and women have been honored in New Castle in many ways, but insofar as is known this is the first time that such a testimonial has been carried out. The service is in charge of the Lawrence County Garden Club and is open to the public. Representatives of each of the clubs in the Federation will be present and it is hoped that many outside of the clubs will be present.

The program for the day follows:

Invocation—Dr. H. C. Weaver, pastor of the First M. E. church.

"During Mrs. Greer's Administration"—Mrs. S. M. Matheny.

"The Federation and the Public Schools"—Dr. C. C. Green, Superintendent of the New Castle Schools.

"Planting A Tree"—Poem read by Mrs. D. R. Harris.

"A Living Memorial"—Representative Bart Richards.

Presentation by Mrs. Marcus Feuchtwanger, president of the Lawrence County Garden Club.

"America"—By children from the Americanization House.

Benediction—Rabbi J. B. Menkes, of Temple Israel.

Radio Broadcast On International Scope Is Being Talked Over

Interchange Of Radio Programs Is To Be Next Big Step In Radio Field.

Believe That Idea Would Promote Friendship Among Nations.

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH.
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—World wide interchange of radio broadcast programs "is just around the corner."

The day of the international "chain program" appears near according to officials of the National Broadcasting company and the British Broadcasting company who talked over the situation today.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith chief engineer of the American company and Captain E. H. Eckersley, head of the British organization already are considering the details, by which a system employed experimentally may be put into general and practical use.

Instead of hooking up the world chain by wire as is done in the United States the plan is to use either the Marconi beam short wave or the radio corporation short wave transmitting and receiving system.

Short Wave Channel.

The American program would be carried to England and Europe on the short wave channel and by the British stations re-converted into broadcast frequencies to be enjoyed by the foreign listeners.

French, German, Italian and Latin American engineers also are interested in the project, while due to cost, time difference and other factors nobody anticipates nightly world-hookups international broadcasting is soon to pass the experimental stage in the opinion of experts.

Europe already has enjoyed some of America's big sporting events, including the Tunney-Dempsey battle. This country however has seen little re-broadcasting of foreign events. One of the few re-broadcasts was that of the chimes of "Big Ben" of London, transmitted from Station 2 LO and re-broadcast here by the Radio Corporation.

Radio Big Events.

Experts anticipate that America eventually may hear the opening of the British parliament, detailed descriptions of the next Olympic games and other events of international interest.

"Radio especially on short waves, is a voice for all nations, great or small, rich or poor, a world-voice, which knows no frontiers and which, by anihilating space has given us the widest and most universal means of intercourse which the world has ever known," declared Senatore G. Marconi.

"Broadcasting has become a social factor and a social force, the power of which is still impossible to even estimate.'

General J. G. Harbord president of the Radio Corporation sees in the increased facilities for communication "that contact which makes for friendship among nations."

Two Philadelphia Girls Are Robbed Of Valuable Gems

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—Police today are attempting to find two men who are alleged to have beaten Betty Flaherty and Emily Schaffer, both of this city, near the Fall Bridge and West River Drive early today and robbed them of $2,000 in jewelry.

The girls told police they were riding in a taxicab when the cab stopped and the driver allowed two strange men to enter.

The cab then took the quartet to the intersection of the bridge road and the drive where the men are alleged to have taken the jewelry from the girls.

"BOOTLEG KING" AWAITS TRIAL

Shenango Township Farmers Are Aroused; Organize Vigilantes

If you have any ideas about retaining the figure and form nature has given you, stay away from Shenango Township farms after dark. Otherwise you are just liable to come home some evening looking like a sieve, or a broken length of spaghetti.

The farmers of the township have banded themselves together into something akin to the old Vigilantes Committee for the purpose of dealing out homely justice to the marauders who have been cleaning out chicken coops.

Impartial Anyway

The thieves have been most impartial, that is to say they have taken chickens and ducks alike, with no favoritism shown to anyone. The latest piece of work was on Saturday night when some lad with taking ways, took 18 ducks from the farm of Samuel Reno. Another farmer is short 160 chickens.

After seducing the 18 ducks from the Reno farm the thieves "took them for a ride" down into a pasture field and there cut their heads off and took the rest of the ducks away.

To say that the farmers of Shenango Township are riled is something akin to saying that Babe Ruth can hit a baseball. They are not only riled, they are all steamed up and as a final resort have banded themselves into a protective agency, with every member ready to shoot before he sees the whites of their eyes.

Any strange automobiles will be under suspicion, any stranger on Shenango Township farms will be considered as "in season" and an "underground" system of signal has been arranged. If you step on one farm, in a moment the news is flashed to all the farms and the visitor may get a varied assortment of buck shot as a souvenir of the occasion.

Jokes Gone Far Enough

The farmers believe the joke has gone far enough. Taking 18 ducks might be a joke, but taking them away all together is taking the joke too far, and they are now prepared to do a little practical joking on their own hook.

Investigation on the part of officers has resulted in no arrests, for the reason that the thieves have made clean get aways. And after seeing half a dozen chicken coops cleaned out the farmers have decided that now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party.

They mean business according to their statements, the business being that of shooting marauders and anybody going onto a farm after dark had best telephone ahead so that the Reception Committee won't be out looking for him.

Believe Accident Victim Is From This Locality

A telegram received Sunday afternoon by the local police was to the effect that a man named Wade Taylor, believed to have relatives in this city, had been killed in an automobile accident earlier in the day at Sidney, N. Y.

The message was from Captain D. E. Fox of the New York state police and asked that possible relatives be sought here. The police made a special effort to locate reltives, getting in touch with all people by the name of Taylor in the city, this being the only name known in the case. It was learned that there was one person by that name known here, Wade Taylor, who is employed at the Fisher Brothers Store. He spent Sunday with his parents in Warren, O., and when he arrived here this morning, reported to the police, thus eliminating him as the possible victim of the accident. Any person knowing of any relatives of this man will confer a favor on the police by getting in touch with them at once.

The ladies are to wear old-fashioned high-laced boots again, according to the latest fashion edict.

EDUCATIONAL FILM IS SHOWN

Resuscitation Methods Are Shown In Film Presented By Tin Plate Co.

How the human lungs work and how persons are saved after they have suffered exposure in the water, been shocked by electricity or gassed by carbo monoxide was graphically portrayed this morning in the Penn theater when, through the courtesy of the American Sheet and Tin Plate company a film was presented for the benefit of the city firemen, policemen, doctors, nurses and the general public.

Although the attendance was somewhat small, due to the hour yet those who were present were unanimous in tehir decision that the film was of great educational value.

The film shows the workings of the human heart, the lungs, the purpose of the lungs and how we breathe.

David S. Pyle through whose courtesy the showing was made possible declares that the film is of great value to every citizen of New Castle and that he will gladly loan it to any organization who wishes to use it in their meetings.

Shoots Squirrel Out Of Season

First arrest in some time for violation of the hunting laws of Pennsylvania was made in Pulaski township Saturday by Constable Robert McClenahan. He caught Julius Peterka of Mercer county, just after he had shot a fox squirrel in the Pulaski township district. Peterka was brought before Alderman O. H. P. Green, where an information charging him with violation of the Pennsylvania state game laws was made against him. He was assessed a fine and costs. He was hunting on license 1117 issued in Mercer county.

Work has been started on excavating for paving of Hillcrest avenue between Highland avenue and Delaware avenue. Paving of this street will give a connection between the paved streets of Delaware and Highland, at the extreme end of the paving on Delaware avenue.

Mills Way, recently paved has been opened for traffic. It was paved with concrete.

Work is progressing nicely on the Jameson Memorial hospital. The first story of the structure is under way. Garfield avenue, giving an approach to the new hospital, from Wilmington avenue has been paved with concrete.

Bricklayers are making good progress on the erection of the new Junior high school on Euclid avenue. The big school is now a considerable distance above the ground, and is reaching higher daily. The structural steel work is going up, as well as the brick work of the walls.

Those who had the privilege of attending the dedication services at the Third United Presbyterian church on East Washington street yesterday were much impressed, both with the services and with the building. This church structure is one that is a magnificent addition to the buildings in New Castle and is admirably fitted for carrying on a big work in the great East Side district.

Dr. G. A. Sowash And Sons Depart For Mission Field

(Special To The News)

NEW WILMINGTON, Oct. 17.—Sailing Wednesday from New York City on the "City of Lahore", Dr. G. A. Sowash and his two sons Geoffry and Ronald left here today. After 20 days on board ship the party will disembark at Port Said, Dr. Sowash going to the Soudan and "Jeff" and "Ronnie" going to Alexandria, Egypt.

Dr. Sowash has been spending his furlough at New Wilmington and now is journeying back to take up his missionary work among the natives of the Soudan. He will in all probability not come back to this country for four years, but it is expected that both of the boys will be back here in two years.

Both "Jeff" and "Ronnie" were members of the local Boy Scout troop and "Jeff" was a varsity tackle on the New Wilmington high school football team.

The first fight for the American heavyweight championship took place in 1886 between Jacob Hyer and Tom Beasley. Hyer was the winner.

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

External treatments seldom banish Piles.

The cause is inside—bad circulation. The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

The bowel walls are weak, the parts almost dead.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments can't give lasting relief.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in hundreds of cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at McKee's Kut Rate, Eckerd's of New Castle, Inc., who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN ANIMAL LAND

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

A SAUCY SOMEBODY IN A QUEER POCKET

Instead of answering Peter's questions, the creature wrapped its tail around a branch that hung low over its head, raised itself high from the log and swung back and forth before Peter's astonished eyes.

"Can't you guess my name now?" it chuckled.

The boy shook his head.

"Not a monkey, surely," answered he. "You do not look a bit like one, and yet I never heard of anything else who could swing from a limb by his tail."

The whiskered stranger had gotten all over being cross. Now it was in high glee over the boy's bewilderment.

"First you thought I was a cat, now 'tis a monkey I remind you of. Oh, dear me, what a stupid two-legs it is! I haven't had such fun since I was a little Pos——Tch! Tch! Tch! There I almost gave myself away.

"Say, boy, take a good look at my big pocket and guess again. I reckon you can't think of any animal that has one like it 'cept me!"

OUT OF THIS POCKET PEEPED AN INQUISITIVE LITTLE HEAD

"Fifty teeth! No fur on the end of its tail! And now a pocket!" gasped the boy. "What next?"

Just as quickly as the creature had twisted its tail about the branch did it unwind it, and now, with a soft thud, dropped to the ground beside the boy, and stood upon its hind legs.

And Peter saw a sight far more curious than any that had gone before. It was something so entirely unexpected that he had to look twice and rub his eyes to make sure he was not seeing things.

Beneath the creature's paws was a deep, wide pocket, and out of this pocket peeped an inquisitive little head—a saucy little somebody who, when he caught sight of Peter staring at him, twitched his ears and stuck out an impertinent tongue at the two-legged stranger.

Splendid Phone Service At Big Convention Here

Daily Local And Long Distance Calls Took Big Spurt In Week

Although the 65th annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School association is over, still it lingers in the memories of the employes of the Bell Telephone company.

For the Bell Telephone company, according to Jack Dunfee, city manager, the convention started about a week before the first delegates arrived in New Castle. Two extra operators were added to the already large staff at "central".

However, it was during the convention that the actual work started. Then the local calls, which usually average about 60,000 every 24 hours, jumped to 68,000 every 24 hours and remained at that figure for the balance of the convention.

Actual long distance calls, not those which are in this part of the state, jumped from 850 to 1,000 a day.

An extra telephone was put in the convention headquarters at the Scottish Rite cathedral. As the ordinary pay stations located there were not adequate, extra pay stations were placed near the lobby. Cards yere placed in prominent positions to help the visiting delegates locate the pay station.

Jack Sunfee, city manager of the Bell Telephone company, was at the cathedral all of the time that the convention was in session, helping the folks to locate the pay stations, and assisting the delegates in any way possible.

Another thing that the Bell Telephone company did for the convention was to have placed in each envelope that was handed to the delegates a booklet, in which were the toll rates to every county seat in the state, and an explanation of how to take advantage of the cheaper rates.

In winning four straight victories over the Pirates the Yankees performed a feat that had been accomplished only once before in last 23 series for the world's baseball championship. The first time was in 1914 when the Boston Braves rode roughshod over the vaunted Athletics of Philadelphia.

statement. They had allowed, he stated, $160,000 for the erection and furnishing of the church, and that this budget had been exceeded by only $700. He then gave a detailed account, which is as follows:

General contract	$115,600

Kitchen equipment	2,600

Grand total	$160,700

"For the past three years, the congregation has contributed $50,000," averred Mr. Colnot, "and with the allowance of $10,000 on the old church home, we should be able to liquidate the debt, both principal and interest, in nine years."

Those who had contributed to the art glass windows were next announced by the Rev. S. B. Copeland, minister of the church, and he extolled their generosity and the way that they had worked to make the windows possible. In the front vestibule of the church there is a large bronze tablet, with this inscription: "In memory of those for whom memorial windows were installed in the original church."

The following organizations, it was announced, earned a bronze tablet by their gifts:

M.—To the memory of our beloved dead, that their faith may be reproduced.

P.—We dedicate this house.

Minister and People—We now, the people of this church and congregation compassed about with a great crowd of witnesses, grateful for our heritage, sensible of the sacrifices of our fathers, do now consecrate ourselves anew to worthy worship of God in this place; and to the constant service of God and Man, we dedicate this building in the Name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

Dedicatory Address.

Taking for his text 1 Kings 9:2, 3, Dr. Montgomery preached the dedicatory sermon, "A House of Prayer."

"We should be happy today to dedicate this church to their sancity of God," he declared. "And especially to dedicate it as a house of prayer. Every forward movement of the church has been based, fundamentally, on prayer. The inception of the church is in prayer, and its progress is in prayer. The church goes forward on its knees and the Third United Presbyterian church of New Castle must move forward in the same manner.

"Prayer is the pivot of piety; prayer is the power house of the church. The greatest thing that a Christian can do to advance God in his church community, city and world , is to pray.

"One of the most difficult things that there is to convince oneself of the practicability of prayer and the best way to do it is to pray. It is not what happens in the pulpit of the church that determines its value to the city; it is what happens in the pews.

"The pastor will have a very great privilege in standing in this pulpit and facing this audience. But what is much greater than preaching, personality, money and all of those things which a church must have, is the power that lies within the heart of the humblest member of the congregation.

House of Prayer.

"When the pastor comes into this pulpit he should be conscious of the fact that the men and women who make up his audience are in the presence of the King, fully prepared to accept the deity. He will remember that his house is a house of prayer and that the eyes of God and the heart of God are here continually.

"Yes, God's eyes will rove up and down the pews, searching out the men and women whose hearts are right with Him.

It is a great concession to present oneself in the house of the living God, with the burdens, trials,, sins and sorrows of the world on one's shoulders; to come to the house of prayer, where the heart of infinite love is ready to heal everything that can be healed and solve problems that we cannot solve ourselves.

"People of all nations can come here with the one feeling that their hears are strangely drawn to the Most High. And when we do what God says, then God will do what we ask. The thing that the average Christian cannot do is to pray and that is one of the fundamental things that God requires. God asks that the people pray and that the church as a whole pray.

"Believe in Jesus and abide him, and then he will abide in us. Believe that you shall receive, and you shall—when you pray. If this church is to eb a house of prayer, then the congregation cannot please him without praying, for we must be in absolute confidence with God.

"With this church every one should so dedicate himself that the supreme desire of all supplications will be for the glory of God. This is the way to make your church—and His—a power in the city so that its influence will reach out and out, bringing lost ones back again.

"I have been at many dedications but in consideration of the money spent, I have not seen the equal of the Third United Presbyterian church of New Castle either in beauty or appointments."

Thousand in Sunday School.

After the offering was taken up, the pastor announced that there were 980 in the Bible school Sunday morning with quite a few who were not in regular attendance, making the grand total present considerably more than a thousand.

There followed a hymn and the benediction by Dr. Montgomery and the first formal dedication services of the Third United Presbyterian church of New Castle were over, launching another church out on the sea of service.

For the dedication the pulpit was banked with a mass of flowers, gifts of individuals and organizations in the church. The choir was magnificently surpliced and sang two anthems in addition to the offertory. A magnavox system supplemented the voice of the speakers making every word plainly discernable to the persons in the last row of the balcony, as well as to those who fringed the rear of the auditorium.

The pastor Rev. S. B. Copeland presided at the service, the choir was in charge of David West as director and the magnificent new pipe organ was splendidly handled by Mrs. Francis N. Eakin, organist.

Evening Service.

Again in the evening the new church was packed to the limit, members of the various United Presbyterian congregations of the city sharing in the service.

The pastors of these United Presbyterian churches, Dr. S. E. Irvine of the First United Presbyterian; Dr. C. J. Williamson of the Highland United Presbyterian and Dr. A. J. Randles of the Second United Presbyterian occupied places on the pulpit platform with Rev. S. B. Copeland and took part in the program of the evening.

Special music by the vested choir was again a feature and the address of the evening was delivered by Dr. J. Knox Montgomery, president of Muskingum college. Dr. Montgomery spoke on "The Church's Biggest Business." He declared that while there are many things that are the business of the church the biggest business of the church as he sees it is the training of the youth for Christian service. The new church building was erected with that idea in mind, he said, and he believed that it would be a wonderful agency in Christian service in this growing city.

During the evening it was announced that the contributions of the morning totalled $1,400. There was a large addition to this amount in the offering of the evening.

The magnificent new church building was inspected by many during the day and it was universally commented on as being one of the finest and most adaptable church structures in the city. The facilities for taking care of the great Sunday school of the congregation are in advance of any church structure in the city in that there are 42 separate rooms for this activity.

The program incident to the dedication will continue for two weeks. Tonight John A. Bell organist of Pittsburgh, will give a recital on the new pipe organ assisted by Mis Margaret Spaulding, soprano and Will Rhodes, Jr., tenor.

All Employes Of City Eating Places Must Have Certificate Of Health

It has come to the attention of the health department, through the efforts of the members of its sanitary police force, that there are numerous persons being employed in restaurants and eating places of the city, who have failed to secure a health certificate, as required, before they may be employed in such a place.

The proprietors of these places must also have certificates and in some instances already found, even they have been neglecting this very necessary thing.

In one instance in the past week, the proprietor of a Moravia street restaurant, with a girl employe, were brought in before the mayor by Sanitary Officer L. E. Hoon to answer the charges of having failed to secure a health certificate.

The proprietor was fined $10, while the girl, who on examination, was found to be suffering from a disease, that makes her unfit for duties in a public eating house, was sent to the county jail for a period of thirty days, to undergo treatment.

It is the intention of the health department and its affiliated sanitary police officers to continue the rigid investigation of all public eating places and bring before the mayor or some other local authority, all those persons found to have neglected the matter of securing a health certificate.

Under the law, no person may be employed in a restaurant or place where the public eats, without having first undergone an examination by a physician and been found in a condition of health that will permit them to handle food for others.

DR. MEISSEL CASE IS BEFORE COURT

Seeks To Collect $18,479 On Note; Greer Estate Executor Claims Note Forgery

Jury trial was started before Judge Hildebrand this morning in the case of Dr. Henry F. A. Meissel against Robert C. Love, executor of the late George Greer, in which Meissel is seeking to collect a judgment of $18,479.52 against the George Greer estate. Executor Love claims that the alleged signature of George Greer to the note is a forgery. Also that the name of the late Judge W. D. Wallace as a witness is a forgery.

The case grows out of a real estate transaction by which the late George Greer purchased a farm in Neshannock township from Emma D. Farver for $10,295. Meissel claims that Greer gave a note to him and Emma D. Farver for that amount, the interest on the note later being assigned to Meissel. The date of the note is March 15, 1913. It is made payable 12 years after date.

Upon this note Dr. Meissel entered judgment on December 13, 1926, for $18,479.52, being the face of the note with interest. A motion was afterwards made to open judgment and let the defendant in to a defense. Considerable testimony was taken. A dozen or more active business men testified that the signature to the note was not that of George Greer. It was also testified to by Dr. R. A. Wallace and J. C. Wallace that the alleged signature of their brother, the late Judge W. D. Wallace, was not the signature of W. D. Wallace.

Upon the testimony offered and the arguments in the case Judge Hildebrand handed down an opinion in which the rule on the plaintiff was made absolute and the defendant let in to a defense. Judge Hildebrand found in his opinion that Dr. Meissel had served time in the Terre Haute, Ind., penitentiary for forgery. It was also found that there was some testimony by an attorney of Terre Haute, Ind., to the effect that W. D. Wallace had acknowledged his signature to him.

In the opinion Judge Hildebrand decided that the question of fact should be tried by a jury. It is this case that is now before the court.

In his answer to the allegations of Dr. Meissel, Executor Love claims that George Greer does not owe Meissel anything, that when he purchased the farm from Emma D. Farver he gave a check for $9,000, and later one for $1,295, both of which checks were cashed. The last named check being cashed by a Terre Haute, Ind., bank, and later finding its way back to a local bank.

While Dr. Meissel claims that the note is genuine, the defense maintains that both the signatures of the late George Greer and W. D. Wallace are forgeries. Witnesses are being called to testify as to the handwriting of the two decedents.

Attorney H. A. Wilkison is representing Dr. Meissel and J. Norman Martin the Greer estate.

SHORT ROMANCES OF EVERYDAY LIFE

Meet Mr. Hayes

By Claire Wesson

ALL day the temperature had hovered 'round 98; a myriad nagging things had happened at the office; his room was an airless box and . . . Mr. Hayes swore. Truthfully, Mr. Hayes was a timid soul, so his oath was mild and dissipirited. But it helped.

Meet Mr. Hayes! A brown-eyed youth, standing 5 feet 10 in his immaculate hose, lean-jawed, a serious mouth, irritating hair which broke into a wave unless closely watched; a conservative in all things. Given to blue serge suits and dark ties.

Mr. Hayes was perfectly aware of the fact that he had abilities, but a childhood spent in a small, adult, circle, and a youth devoted to an invalid mother, had served to dam up his natural outlets and now that he was free and alone, it seemed too late.

There was Miss Curtis, for instance. Meet Miss Curtis! A piquant nose, demure mouth and guileless blue eyes; a shingle bob; staggeringly brief frocks and slim silken legs which knew every complicated maze of the Charleston; Miss Curtis, who worked at the next desk; who was constantly surrounded with the badinage and attention of visiting salesmen, and who only at rare intervals turned her careless gaze on Mr. Hayes. And yet . . .

And there was Mr. Collins. Meet . . . No, don't bother! You'd probably dislike him. The boss. As a matter of fact, I don't like him myself, and the only reason I brought him in was because he held in the hollow of his pudgy hand the Big Job which, save for the fact that he was a Timid Soul, would belong to Mr. Hayes.

Mr. Hayes swore. And contemplated with growing horror the contents of the suit box which had been lying across his bed awaiting his arrival. For, instead of the new suit, conservatively blue and double breasted and sane, this was an atrocity in the palest of tans, soft and—jazzy! It suggested—night clubs and taxis and restaurants beyond the ken of Mr. Hayes. At that it was a beautiful piece of material. Mr. Hayes fingered it gingerly and held the coat up for arms-length inspection.

Fifteen minutes later Mr. Hayes regarded himself in the mirror with astonishment and something like gratification. The thing was a perfect fit; with that tie that Aunt Emma sent at Christmas (never worn, by the way) and the new straw hat. . . . Really!

He slipped into the corridor like a conspirator. And promptly ran into the arms of Miss Steele — Miss Steele-with-an-e, please!—who had never vouchsafed a glance to the modest Mr. Hayes who sat opposite her at the dinner table at night. Her eyebrows rose briefly, contemplating the jaunty figure of Mr. Hayes; she smiled!

"Why, how do you do, Mr. Hayes!"

It held everything: interest, applause, admiration; it exalted the bosom of the transformed Mr. Hayes and then, with sudden confidence he accepted it as his due; and his bow was everything gracious and—aloof. He moved on; the eyes of Miss Steele followed, and as he turned the corner of the staircase:

"Oh, Mr. Hayes!" He turned slowly.

"I was just wondering. . . . Won't you join us tonight for a little ride? . . . My brother's car . . . just out to the Tumble Inn." Mr. Hayes considered; shook a regretful head.

"Im really sorry," he said. "Some other night . . . ?" Really, his smile was charming. Strange, Miss Steele considered, she had never noticed . . . and then he was gone.

Behold Mr. Hayes' parade downtown; a growing confidence under a battery of feminine glances. By the time he had reached the corner where the huge pile of the Amalgamated reared itself, timidity had fled. He accepted the nod of the elevator starter graciously; the rather startled glance of the feminine elevator operator with serenity; the glances of the office boy and telephone operator indifferently.

He glanced about. Miss Curtis was holding court with two of the usual salesmen; she did not glance in his direction. Mr. Hayes glared at the offending salesmen, banged several books on his desk, glanced again at Miss Curtis. Suddenly resolution dawned in his pleasant brown eyes. Deliberately he strode across the office; deliberately knocked on the boss's door; deliberately stepped inside. The boss was alone under his brindle eyebrows he surveyed Mr. Hayes without recognition; but before he could speak Mr. Hayes had taken the floor.

"Good morning, Mr. Collins!" It was pleasant, conversational and not quite up to the usual standard of deference. Mr. Collins looked up sharply.

"Oh, good morning . . . Hayes, isn't it?" Mr. Hayes tightened his jaw.

"Yes, Hayes is the name," he said pleasantly. "Been working here six years now . . . 'bout time you knew me." He dropped into a chair without apology and drew it sociably close to the desk. Mr. Collins drew his brindle eyebrows together. "About the Miami office, Mr. Collins. . . ." Mr. Collins waved a pudgy hand.

"Not now, not now," he said irritably. "As a matter of fact, Mr. Hayes, I have Trumbull in mind. . . ." Something banged under Mr. Collins' startled nose.

"Trumbull be hanged," said Mr. Hayes, still pleasantly. "That's my job. And you know it. I can run circles around Trumbull as far as that job is concerned and I want it. And what's more, I intend to have it, or you can get somebody else to fill my place here!"

For a minute Mr. Collins purpled with rage; met the pleasant brown gaze of Mr. Hayes and hesitated; then, strangely enough, he smiled! Smiled broadly, threw back his head and roared. He ended his mirth on a sudden gasp, rose and held out his hand to the quiet astonished Mr. Hayes.

"Well, really, Mr. Hayes," he said amiably. "Perhaps you're right! As a matter of fact"—he smiled again—"yes, you're right! The job is yours."

Mr. Hayes rose abruptly; the ground swayed a little beneath him. "And"—the Boss flicked open a cigar humidor—"a cigar, Mr. Hayes! Come in this afternoon and we'll go into things."

The door closed after Mr. Hayes. Cigar in his mouth he contemplated the outer office beheld Miss Curtis laughing up into the eyes of the younger of the salesmen; crossed the office with a swift stride rather neatly he pocketed the salesman and placed himself before the insouciant Miss Curtis.

"I am taking you to see 'The Funnies' tonight, Miss Curtis," he said. "I'll call for you at 7:30." Miss Curtis tilted back her head and looked at him; astonishment, indignation, dawning interest, hesitancy.

"Well, really, Mr. Hayes," she said coolly. Mr. Hayes returned her glance with amiable determination.

"At 7:30," he said firmly.

Miss Curtis' glance dropped. She shrugged ever so ligthly. She smiled so brightly.

"At 7:30," she said.

Mr. Hayes wove his way back to his desk and took up a sheaf of papers. His phone rang busily.

"Yes . . . this is Mr. Hayes . . . What? . . . Oh, yes, the boy delivered the wrong suit. Yes, so I discovered. No, that's quite all right . . . you can send for it tonight . . . No, it was no inconvenience at all. Good-bye."

Mr. Hayes hung up the receiver.

"And you say you lost control of your car?"

"Yes. I couldn't keep up the instalments."

Within the Gates

By Margaret Taylor

LADY I've walked a good many miles in this cold wind, and I ain't had a bite to eat since early this mornin'."

Rachel eyed the forlorn relic of manhood before her with something of scorn. He looked harmless enough with his bleared old eyes and several weeks' growth of bushy white beard, but you never could tell about these men. The beard was probably false.

"I've heard the same story too often," she said as she shut the door in his face.

"Only a bite to eat that's all I ask," begged the stranger of the closed door. It remained obdurate. The stranger shook a cold stiff hand at it.

"I'll git even with ye," he muttered.

He caught a glimpse of Rachel's little daughter Julie, as she parted the curtains of the front room window to peer out at him.

"If I had that brat, I'd drown her," he soliloquized as he turned away. This thought made him feel better. He was bitter against heaven and earth. There seemed to be no place for him anywhere since he got old. Nobody wanted him and nobody wanted to feed him, either.

The wind was bitter. The walls of his stomach seemed to be caving in and in order to alleviate the terrible pangs of hunger, he took off his threadbare scarf and tied it about his middle so tightly that it hurt. On on he went. He did not know how long or how far he walked. He did not know where he was.

The wind had died down. It was beginning to snow, first small, lazy flakes, increasing steadily in number and volume. He drew his thin overcoat about him, and sighed. He was on the flats now. There were no houses anywhere in sight, nothing but a broad, vast stretch of bleak whiteness, and himself, a small, black atom in the midst of it.

"Mister!"

Something tugged at his coat sleeve. He looked down. His bleared, snow-dimmed vision could just make out the farmhouse child. It was the red of her warm coat and bright bonnet drawn down over flaxen curls that he saw most plainly.

His chance! He leered down at her.

"I got losted," she piped up at him. "I went out to find you. I bringed you my lunch my mother always gives me when she goes to milk the cows. An' then I got losted, but I found your feet in the snow and put my feet there and found you."

He was going to drown this brat. He had passed the river, but it could not be far away. It would be a simple matter to break through the ice.

"Here, mister."

"I'm Julie, Mister," she informed him. "Please eat the lunch."

"I'll take ye home to your ma, fust," he quavered. "She'll be worryin' for ye."

Hand in hand they plodded on through the snow. The child's hand nestled in his own brought warmth and comfort to the tired old heart. He forgot his hunger, forgot the cold, forgot that nobody wanted him. One small being had trusted him.

The darkness hindered progress. They could see nothing. Perhaps they were going away from the farmhouse instead of toward it.

Voices across the snow! The gleam of lanterns!

"She's been kidnaped. I know. That tramp—"

"I'll shoot him!" A man's voice.

"Daddy!"

The child's voice rang out—an excited peal.

"Baby!"

The woman had her clasped tightly to her heart. The old man turned to go. He remembered his hunger, and his hatred of this woman.

"I got losted, and the nice old man brung me home."

Hot blisters on his feet, like needlepoints, red before his eyes, complete oblivion!

The warmth of a friendly fire awakened him. Somebody was feeding him hot soup.

"Come," insisted the woman, "a little more soup. Julie wants you should stay here. Guess we can find some odd jobs for you to do."

He looked questioningly into the farmer's grizzled face. The farmer nodded, kindly.

"Guess it's up to you to stay, stranger," said he.

The Cradle Snatcher

By Phil Moore

THE Great Detective trembled with the certain knowledge that his golden-haired client's life was in peril. Violent hands might grip her slim throat at any minute. A firm step on the sidewalk. Even now the fatal moment—

"Hello, Reggie," called the postman.

"Hello," answered Reggie shortly.

Funny how someone coming on the scene suddenly, spoiled things. His golden-haired client vanished and in her place sat Ermintrude, the freak pumpkin his father paid him two cents a day to keep an eye on. Mr. McWhortle intended to exhibit Ermintrude at the county fair, and he was afraid that old Byather Brown, who lived across the street and who also exhibited, had evil designs on her.

Reggie had been detecting on the pumpkin for a week and nothing had happened, with the exception of the afternoon when old Byather leered across the fence and snorted contemptuously at Ermintrude. At that, she was worth a snort, for she grew in lumps in all directions, as though she could not make up her mind which side to expand on, and sent out experimental bunches here and there.

The Great Detective sighed heavily, for detecting on Ermintrude was very dull work. And there was a big job on down at the swimming hole—the lifeless bodies of six cats had been found floating on its surface within a week. Reggie felt sure he could solve the mystery if he could get away from Ermintrude long enough to look into the matter.

A bumping noise came from inside the house. That was mamma rolling off the fat she put on at the beach. A snoring noise from the guest-room window. That was the Cradle Snatcher taking her nap. Idly he wondered how much longer the Cradle Snatcher would stay and if Buzzy would marry her. Buzzy was horribly in love. But mamma was wild. Simply wild. Reggie had heard her say so himself.

It was she who had named Suzanne the Cradle Snatcher and who had said she was old enough to be Buzzy's mother and that her face was painted and her hair dyed. And Jane had added that Buzzy was a softy to be roped in by the first old hag who rolled her eyes at him.

The great detective, himself, had sort of liked the Cradle Snatcher when she first came to visit them. She smelled swell and kind of wiggled like a green snake when she walked. Her cheeks were very pink, her mouth very red, her hair very yellow. Reggie had liked her right up to the day when he saw her kick Pat because he'd done her the supreme honor of digging up an old calf's head and depositing it in her lap.

The August sun scorched. Reggie was thirsty. He wandered into the kitchen after a drink. All was quiet upstairs. Mamma must be sleeping after her roll. Reggie wondered if she would watch Ermintrude for the afternoon, and rushed upstairs to ask her.

Outside the guest room door he paused curiously. Mamma had said that she would like to get a good look at the Cradle Snatcher when she was asleep. It would be a revelation, mamma had added grimly. Cautiously the great detective applied an eye to the keyhole. He could see a hand on the pillow. A head with brownish fringe surrounding a bald spot as large as papa's. The doorknob yielded under his hand. He tiptoed to the bed and stared at the pale grease-covered face on the pillow. It was the Cradle Snatcher, all right. But such a changed Cradle Snatcher.

"She used disguises, too," thought Reggie wonderingly, as his eye caught the gleam of her beautiful golden hair on the bureau. There were the little yellow curls over the ears that he had seen Buzzy kissing. Over the back of a chair was her short blue dress. On the floor stretched a pair of flesh silk stockings. The Great Detective's eyes blazed. His breath came in little gasps. He had an idea!

It was almost 6 o'clock before the Great Detective admitted that the dead cat mystery had him stumped. He was hurrying home with an abstracted frown on his face when he saw Buzzy swinging up Elm street in front of him. Reggie broke into a cold sweat and then broke into a run. There would be the dickens to pay if Buzzy got home first!

"Hey, there!" shouted Buzzy, as the Great Detective shot past him.

Reggie increased his speed desperately. And Buzzy, thinking it was a game, started after him, caught him and ran up the steps with Reggie in his arms.

"Everything's on the table," said mamma, looking at Buzzy kind of mad, as she had ever since she had seen the Cradle Snatcher.

"Where's Suzanne?" asked Buzzy, determinedly cheerful.

"I saw something that looked like her sprawling out in the pumpkin," answered mamma.

"In the pumpkin patch?" repeated Buzzy, puzzled, staring out the window. From the house he could see the Cradle Snatcher's golden hair gleaming in the green leaves, above a glimpse of her blue dress. He started towards the garden.

"Wait, wait, Buzzy," pleaded the Great Detective, following as well as a feller could whose knee had turned to water. "I gotta explain!"

But Buzzy was staring blankly at Ermintrude's knobby head one side of which was resplendent with Suzanne's beautiful golden hair. The Cradle Snatcher's short blue dress had been stuffed with dead grass, likewise her flesh colored stockings. From the road or from the house Ermintrude looked like a woman asleep in the garden.

"I did it," wailed the Great Detective scared at the sight of Buzzy's white face as he examined the golden wig. "I wanted to detect the dead cats, so I disguised Ermintrude to keep Byather Brown away. I borrowed Suzanne's hair. She was asleep and wasn't using it. It was on the bureau. . . ."

He broke off, alarmed at the stony expression Buzzy had on his face. He looked kind of dead and cold.

"I meant to get home before she needed her hair, Buzzy," sobbed Reggie. "I'll take it right up to her. Her head must feel awful empty. She's like papa without any hair on top of her?"

"Never mind, kid," said Buzzy numbly. For a minute Reggie thought he was going to cry. But he just started toward the house with the golden hair in his hand.

"Well, of all things," began Mrs. McWhortle. But she stopped short after a look at Buzzy.

"Take this up to Suzanne," said Buzzy harshly. "I'm going to camp with Bob Merrifield for a week or two. You can tell her. I'll leave right away." And he went up the back stairs two at a time.

"Puppy love," sighed Mrs. McWhortle. Reggie looked around for Pat, but he wasn't in sight.

"You're a good boy, Reggie," she added, patting the Great Detective on the head. This was even more surprising. He had expected the hair brush.

"Is Muffler getting a pretty fair salary?"

"Oh, yes; enough to keep body and soul and touring car together."

"That married couple in the next flat are having a terrible argument." "I don't hear his voice at all." "No; it's the regular family argument."

Unwelcome Guests

By Clyde Weldon

MRS. MORSE wearily leaned to the open window. There was little enough coolness anywhere this midsummer weather.

"Thank goodness, the work's done! Two more weeks of rest before the peaches will be ripe." She peered down the road. "Bout time for Homer—" The words died in her throat, as a rickety little car came into view around the bend. "People! Homer's brought visitors again!"

She watched as the five came toward the house. Four extra people to cook for in this weather. And strangers, too!

Homer's hearty voice boomed in the hall. "Come in, folks! Mrs. Morse'll be glad to see you. Kinda lonesome for her out here in the country." Lonesome, with 12 working hours to the day!

He spoke to his wife hurriedly. "Met these folks in town, Hilda. Never been here before. Seemed a shame to send 'em to a hotel, so I brought 'em right along."

With angry, hostile eyes, Hilda surveyed the newcomers. A young man and his wife, quite evidently honey-mooning. Her eyes softened as she looked at them, but her lips set grimly at the appearance of the other two. Men, probably on the sunny side of 40, who just escaped being shabby.

"Bums!" was her inward and inelegant verdict, as she stalked from the heat of the hall to the greater heat of the kitchen to prepare supper.

"If only he'd bring his friends!" she said to herself, fiercely, as she had said many times before. "I wouldn't mind friends. But I never undertook to run a free hotel for him."

The kitchen door opened slowly and Homer edged fearfully in. "Now, mother!" He raised his hand to stem the inevitable outburst. "I didn't mean to ask 'em, honestly I didn't. But I couldn't let 'em go to Bud's eating house, now, could I? Just this once, mother. I'll promise not to do it again."

In silence Mrs. Morse turned back to her work. Those promises. He'd made them twice a month for ten years, ever since the last of their children had married and gone away. Promises meant nothing from him. But what was the use of arguing?

Homer's eye kindled. "And a bride and groom, mother! We haven't had a bride and groom here since Dick was married."

Mrs. Morse spoke reluctantly. "They're all right, poor dears. But the other two! They might rob and murder us, for all you know."

Homer shook his head comfortably. "Oh, no, they're nice people. I know they're nice people."

And they probably were all right, reflected his wife, grudgingly, though Homer had far too much faith in people. She had tried in many ways to cope with this problem. Once she had left Homer, refusing to get even one meal for six strangers. Homer had done the work himself bungingly, and had come after her with tears in his eyes and promises on his lips. It had been almost a month before he brought the next guests.

Supper was not a success. Hilda roused herself to be cheerful, in deference to the bride and groom, but her mind was always on the other two guests.

"They may be all right," she told herself, "but they don't look it. They may be honest and well brought up, but if I knew of a robbery or a murder hereabouts, I'd arrest them at once." She looked thoughtfully at her courteous husband, urging second helpings on everyone. "Honest people," she argued mentally, "have no right to look like criminals."

The men had deposited their bags in the front chamber and Mrs. Morse went up in the evening to be sure that everything was in order. Attracted by a glitter of something on the floor, she picked it up curiously and her eyes widened.

"Now, I don't know what that is," she told herself, honestly, "but it certainly might pass for a burglar's tool." And in that moment her eyes were alight with sudden inspirations. She slipped the metal object into her pocket for future reference. Homer deserved to be taught a lesson.

In pursuance of the idea which had been slowly growing within her since Homer first appeared, she tiptoed into the front parlor, to the old-fashioned safe. With fingers that trembled, she fumbled the knob and found the combination finally. Into an improvised bag made of her looped-up skirt she swept all the safe's contents, money and securities, and, with little furtive glances behind her, stole upstairs and hid the lot at the very bottom of her trunk.

Secure in the assurance that these visitors would be the last Mrs. Morse slept soundly and rose at her usual early hour. But, early as she was, Homer, gray-faced, was up before her.

"They're—they're gone, Hilda," he said, avoiding her eye.

Mrs. Morse tied on her apron. "Who are gone?"

"The two men you didn't like, I heard a noise and came down. And —Hilda, they've robbed the safe!" The deep hurt in his tone made Hilda wince.

"Gone!" she repeated.

"Oh, you needn't say anything. I've learned my lesson, I guess. I'll never bring anyone here again to pester you."

Puzzled, Mrs. Morse followed him into the front parlor and stopped short. The safe was standing open, fairly taken apart by expert fingers. In sudden relief she remembered the little packet safe in her trunk upstairs.

"They were thieves, Hida," said Homer, dully, "and I trusted them."

She looked at him. She realized all at once how much this meant to him, this betrayal of trust. His face looked gray and old in the half light. She laid a gentle hand on his arm.

"I played a trick on you, Homer," she whispered, "and I'm sorry. Everything is safe upstairs in my trunk." She choked suddenly. "And you know, Homer, I like to have people come. It kinda keeps me from getting lonesome."

"Have you any complaint to make?" asked the prison visitor.

"Yes, I have," replied the life convict. "There ain't nearly enough exits from this place."

The Daily Tread

By Monte Darrell

IT was past 5 o'clock in the afternoon and people were beginning to return from their work. From his wheelchair in the basement living room, Michael could hear the steady "tap-tap" of footsteps on the sidewalk above him. By pushing himself forward he could even see the shoes that made the sounds, and it amused him in his invalidism to watch for familiar footwear and to weave fanciful dreams around each pair of boots.

Almost daily he recognized the same gay, impractical sandals of the flappers and shopgirls; the heavy, thicksoled brogans of outdoor men and teamsters, and the expensive, highly polished oxfords of successful business men. Then there was a dainty pair of blonde kid slippers that Michael watched for more closely than the others.

They were a queer little complex, those slippers because the sedateness of the sturdy, square heels belied the frivolity of the butterfly bows and cutwork. Michael had never seen the face of the wearer, but being a sentimentalist, he loved and looked up to the owner, both literally and figuratively speaking.

As has already been said, Michael was usually amused and entertained by the passing parade of boots, but tonight they seemed to mock and chide him for his helplessness. Hopelessly, he pounded his disabled knee with a clenched, angry fist, while the incessant "tap-tap" continued overhead.

"The daily tread in pursuit of its daily bread," he murmured bitterly. "Active fortunate beings and probably dissatisfied with their lot!"

At that moment the blonde kid slippers passed his window, else his soliloquy would not have ended. Michael straightened in his chair, to obtain a better view and, to his surprise, the slippers turned into the very apartment where he was living. He heard the outer door open and shut, and, in another second, an excited young girl had stepped into his presence. Like her slippers, she was pretty and gay, yet dependable.

"Please excuse me for coming in here like this," she gasped, "but a man has been following me for five blocks, and I had to lose him somehow."

"Oh, that's all right," exclaimed Michael, who was overjoyed by the incident, "but please excuse me for not rising. You see, I am er—"

"Crippled?" asked the girl softly.

"Yes, crippled," he faltered. "Now, won't you sit down? You are quite safe here. Tell me more of your pursuer, perhaps I can help you. Who was he, some fresh masher?"

"No," replied the girl with a defiant toss of her head, "he is a fellow who is making himself annoying just because I refused to marry him. I don't love him, never can love him, yet he persists in pestering me and making my life miserable! But my trouble is trivial compared to yours. Did you have an accident?"

"Yes," Michael admitted. "About a year ago I prevented a child from being struck by a truck. I myself was hit by the car and I've been helpless ever since. The doctors say I am incurable."

"I'm so sorry," sympathized the girl. Then, consulting her watch, "Well, I must go. I think the man has gone now."

Michael was so pleased by their meeting that he decided to take a long chance and attempt to keep her a while longer. Taking his courage in both hands, he said:

"I know I presume, but won't you stay and have supper with me? Mother will be home soon—she works, you know. Please say you will stay. I get very lonely with only the radio for company."

The girl couldn't help but detect the eagerness in the man's invitation, and she had not the heart to refuse. And what a repast it was! Michel's mother must have sensed the presence of a guest, for she came home with a delicious roasted chicken. The girl insisted on going to the store for ice cream and macaroons, and she also bought a huge bunch of carnations to deck the center of their dining-table.

During the meal, Michael learned that his friend's name was Martha, that she shared a suite with another girl, and worked as a secretary to an eminent surgeon. She left Michael and his mother with a promise to call again, but Michael was not prepared to receive her the very next afternoon. She did not come alone, but was accompanied by a fine-looking gentleman, whom she introduced as Dr. Ray.

The doctor extended a cordial hand to the astonished Michael, and exclaimed heartily. "Well, well, so you are the chap Miss Martha has been raving about all morning! With your permission, I'd like to examine your injury. I feel sure you can be helped."

"I am afraid it is impossible to help me, sir," stammered Michael.

"Impossible!" repeated the genial doctor. "Nothing is impossible, unless we think it is. I wish you could see the soldier-lads I've put on their feet!"

Several days later he performed another successful operation.

Michael's road to recovery was a long and painful one, but with Martha to cheer him, he was soon convalescing in his own basement living-room. The daily tread of footsteps ceased to taunt him; instead, it seemed to stand for a vast army of happy men and women, marching toward a brilliant future, and some day he would be a part of that army.

And about Martha's slippers. At Michael's request, she wore them until they were actually shabby. In fact, she wore them until they were replaced by a pair of white satin slippers, to match her bridal costume.

Arrest Three More Youths In Robberies

Three additional arrests were made Sunday by Officers Horner, Lynch and Elder in the breaking up of the alleged robber gang of youths, four of whom were arrested previously on Saturday.

Those arrested Sunday were Albert Briggs, aged 15, Ben Nessle, aged 16 and James Parker, aged 15. The first two were found hiding in the haymow of the New Castle Lumber and Construction company barn on South Mercer street. The third boy was found at home.

The police here also have the member of the rather unusual gang, Ollie Gallagher, aged 15, who was arrested Friday night at Campbell, O., following four robberies there. He was turned over to the local authorities by the Ohio authorities.

All the boys have admitted their part in several robberies here, the police state. According to the story told the police, Gallagher, Nessle, Parker and Briggs pulled the robberies at Campbell Friday night. Gallagher was apprehended but the other three escaped and came back here Saturday afternoon.

These three went to the office of the Standard Brewing company, where they had hidden their booty from other robberies, in the safe. They found the safe open and their stuff gone, as a result of the activity of the police here.

When they had originally entered the Brewery office to hide their loot, they found the safe open, the boys told the police. Gallagher and Nessle had taken the plate off the rear of the door over the combination and learned the combination, then placed their loot in it, and had locked it up, planning to return and secure it later, if the police had not beaten them to it.

All the boys with the exception of one have been turned over to Juvenile Court Officer J. M. Dunlap, some on new charges and others on violation of paroles in previous cases. Gallagher and Mike Perett have been charged with larceny before Alderman O. H. P. Green. Nessle, Briggs, and Ross are being held in connection with other legal processes. Dominick Lambert and James Parker have been paroled, to their homes for the present.

To Build Addition To Court House

More Room Is Needed Since An Additional Judge Has Been Appointed

Architect A. L. Thayer has been engaged by the county commissioners to prepare plans for an additional room to be used by Judge Chambers as a private office.

The room will likely be located on the South side of the court house, adjoining the prothonotary's office. The first idea was to throw out steel beams and construct the room on a level with the second floor, but plans for a room to be entered from the first floor also, are being considered.

This room could be used to very good advantage by the prothonotary. It is planned to erect the room as economically as possible as it is realized that a new court house may be constructed sometime in the immediate future and the commissioners do not wish to add any unnecessary expense.

In the event of the erection of a new court house it would be necessary to have the electors vote on a bond issue. This would require time, so that it is likely that it would be several years before actual building could be started even if there would be favorable action on the bond issue. In the meantime it is necessary to have an additional room for the bond issue. In the meantime it is necessary to have an addition room for the new judge. It is likely that some changes will also be made in some of the jury rooms, in order to provide better accommodations for mixed juries.

Police Arrest Driver Of Car After Accident

When Officers Lynch and Nelson arrived in front of 424 Park avenue Sunday morning in answer to a call to the effect that there had been an accident, they found J. Harvey Smith sitting in a car alleged to have run into and damaged a car belonging to R. S. Reed of 427 Boyles avenue, doing damage to both machines.

Smith was brought to the police station and put up a forfeit of $100 for his appearance at a hearing to be held later. He is charged with reckless driving.

Later it was found that Smith about two hours previous had driven his machine into the car of E. J. Miller of 603 Fairview avenue, in front of the Y. W. C. A., doing some damage to it.

Fine Interest In Revival Services

Large Crowds Hear Rev. And Mrs. Redmon, Evangelists At Nazarene Church

The revival meetings at the Church of the Nazarene Sunday were well attended and much interest and enthusiasm disseminated. The Sunday school session in the morning was well attended and the regular morning worship saw the main auditorium well filled. Rev. (Mrs.) Redmon led in the opening prayer; the congregational singing was spontaneous and cheerful; the orchestra rendered an offertory number and then Rev. and Mrs. Redmon gave a very beautiful duet in song. Rev. Redmon preached a very stirring message from the text "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it (my church)".

The evening service began with a prayer meeting at 6 o'clock after which the Young Peolpe's society held its meetings. The senior department was addressed by Rev. Redmon upstairs in the church auditorium; Mrs. Redmon addressed the intermediate department in the Sunday school annex and Mrs. Rowe had charge of the juniors in the church basement. These meetings are carried on each week at 6:30 p. m. A full house gathered for the regular preaching service at 7:30. The rear rooms were opened up to seat the crowd. A very inspiring song service was led by the pastor, Rev. Rowe. The orchestra played an offertory selection and Rev. and Mrs. Redmon sang again together a number entitled "Keep Me on the Firing Line." This selection brought much response from the congregation. Mrs. Redmon gave the evening sermon.

Services will continue each evening this week at 7:30 except Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Redmon will sing specials at each service and they will alternate in their preaching.

He also alleged that he came on to the Shenango Valley hospital, where he was taking some people and these same two men, who were following his machine, jumped in the running board of his machine, near that place, one of them striking him and causing him to run his machine into a pole. A SAFE PLACE TO BUY

Truth--Quality--Price

Truth

Furniture here is seen in its true light and everything concerning it is called by its right name. "Trade Terms" are not used without full explanation as to their true meaning.

For instance—our salesmen will tell you that the term mahogany means nothing more than mahogany veneer.

That "mahogany finish" means stained to resemble mahogany.

That "Solid Mahogany" means solid inside and out.

The same applies to all other woods.

Lack of knowledge as to construction and finish of furniture places no one at disadvantage here.

Quality

We only buy from the most reliable makers, who conscientiously work with us in our desire to secure the best that high skill and good material can produce.

Here is "quality" furniture for the finest city or country home—for the apartment that must be furnished for a moderate sum—for the little bungalow.

Price

Our store policy includes the purchase of furniture in large quantities on a cash basis. That this favorably affects your interests as a customer of our store is partially shown by the prompt service given us by manufacturers at a time when many dealers are unable to obtain shipments in any but small lots and then only irregularly and at comparatively high prices.

It's only natural that manufacturers should give their best discounts and make satisfactory shipments to those dealers who buy most largely of their products and make immediate payment therefor.

These advantages of best discounts and prompt shipments which we enjoy, and which so greatly benefit our customers, would be of much less avail were it not for the great storage capacity of our warerooms, which enables us to receive and store immense quantities of goods in advance of our actual need for them.

This has made it possible for us to anticipate a number of price advances and to maintain our assortments at their usual high level of satisfaction.

In regards to our payment plan —we really have a complete credit service. Haney's extends you the most liberal terms and gives you the goods right away—no red tape—just come in, pick out the piece or pieces you need and have them sent to your home. Payments will be made to suit your convenience—always courteous and confidential.

NEW CASTLE HIGH DEFEATS DAYTON 38-7

Locals Impressive In Victory, Dayton Team Is Outclassed

New Castle High Football Team Gains Important Victory Over Ohio Eleven; Fast Running Attack By Locals Bewilders Visitors; Six Touchdowns Marked Up By Red And Black Squad; Dayton Tallies Touchdown In Final Quarter After Drive Down Field; First Quarter Hard Fought; Reider, Sillman And Harper Are Outstanding; Substitutes Show Up Well; Crowd Of 6,000 Witnesses Schoolboy classic.

By "BUGS" WALTHER

New Castle High football team employing whirlwind tactics blasted its way to another important gridiron victory here Saturday afternoon at Ben Franklin High stadium by sweeping the Dayton Steel High team off their feet and chalking up a 38 to 7 decision.

It was the fifth consecutive verdict of the season for the red and black eleven, and established beyond a possibility of a doubt that the 1927 team is one of the most powerful in recent years at the local institution.

The defeat of the Ohio combination was complete in every sense of the word, outweighed, and outfought for three quarters, the "Cracker" state team gathered up courage in the fourth period and by a determined drive succeeded in crossing the coveted goal line of the New Castle eleven. It was a noble effort on the part of the rather well battered and demoralized Dayton team to puncture the coveted line, and they deserve credit for their stand in the face of overwhelming odds.

Held scoreless in the first period by a staunch defensive stand on the part of the visiting combination, the New Castle High team came through with their first touchdown early in the second quarter, and from this point until the close of the game it was a succession of New Castle marches to the goal line.

Paul Reider the "galloping ghost" of the local contingent led the parade with a pair of touchdowns, while Turk, Harper, Sillman, and Sage each contributed one touchdown to the total for the afternoon performance.

Show Offensive Strength

New Castle High demonstrated a marked superiority over the Dayton team in the matter of offensive ability, the local backfield men when called upon to puncture the visitors' line, did so with a vengeance. Paul Reider and Captain Richards skirted the ends for long gains,while Tommy Harper and Art Sillman added considerable yardage through the line.

The solidity of the New Castle attack was quite clearly portrayed by the linemen, the forward wall of the red and black aggregation charged with a fury and drove the Dayton team back time after time for losses. When called upon to open holes in the line the guards and tackles responded with a will and allowed the backfield men full sway.

In only one department did the Dayton team outshine the locals and that was through the aerial attack, the visitors completed five out of nine attempts to gain through the "ozone" while New Castle tried four passes and completed two of them. Dayton tallied their touchdown on the forward pass route when Corbett subbing for Allen took a short pass from Shubert and scampered over the goal line.

New Castle High gained sixteen first-downs against four for the Dayton team, showing to some extent the workings of the red and black. The locals had the ball in their possession for the greater part of the game, and were forced but a few times to rely on a punt to get the ball out of dangerous territory.

First Period Hard Fought.

At the outset of the battle it looked for a time as if the New Castle team had underestimated the strength of the visitors. Dayton Steele came forward with a display of defensive power in the first quarter and New Castle was held scoreless for the period. The teams battled in mid-field most of the first session.

New Castle tallied their first touchdown after the start of the second quarter. With the ball on the 45-yard line, Harper crashed the line for a first down and Sillman skirted right end for a 10-yard gain that put the ball on 35-yard line. New Castle drew a 20-yard penalty on the next play and the ball rested on the 48-yard line. A pass Reider to Ostrosky gained 11 yards for the locals, Richards picked up a yard in the center of the line, and on the next play Paul Reided carried the ball 27 yards around right end for a touchdown. The fleet quarterback, behind perfect interference, had little difficulty in threading his way through the Dayton defense. The try for an extra point by Sillman was blocked.

Dayton Steele chose to receive after the first touchdown and they did not have the ball long in their possession, before Schubert was forced to punt. New Castle high with Reicer, Harper and Sillman carrying the ball down the field on successive plays soon reached the 1-yard line and Earl Turk, subbing for Captain Richards, plunged over the line for the second touchdown. Sillman was successful in the try for an extra point.

First Half 13-0.

The first half of the game ended with New Castle on their way to another touchdown. The score at the end of the half was 13 to 0. Dayton Steele made several feeble attempts to gain through the line, but were repulsed by the locals, and finally they took to the air, but this method was also insufficient.

Reider went over the line for the third touchdown soon after the start of the third quarter. After the locals had received the ball on a punt from Schubert, working the ball down the field on a series of straight plunges, Reider galloped nine yards for his second marker. Sillman was unsuccessful in his try for the extra point.

New Castle high was close to another touchdown in the final minutes of play in the third period and had the ball on the 13-yard line as the session ended, Richards, Harper and Sillman carried the ball on successive plays to the 1-yard line and Sillman crashed through right tackle for the touchdown. Reider added the extra point by running the ball around right end, and barely stepped inside the line.

New Castle, securing the ball in mid-field after Dayton had tried several times to gain through the line, began another determined march to the goal line with Turk and Sillman doing the brunt of the work, and finally Tommy Harper crashed thru guard for a 5-yard plunge that carried him over the line. Reider attempted to pass for the extra point but it was grounded.

Subs Get Chance.

With a 32 to 0 advantage the New Castle high coaches began sending in numerous substitutes to replace the regulars and save them for the South high game next Saturday. The scrubs came through in fine style and worked the ball to the 1-foot line from where Sage plunged over for the sixth touchdown. Sillman missed the extra point.

Shortly after the sixth touchdown New Castle high had practically a second and third team lineup on the field, and Dayton Steele, taking advantage of the situation, began a

Look Good For Years — By Feg Murray

It is seldom that two athletes ever show so marked a superiority over their contemporaries as Helen Wills and Bobby Jones did during the past summer. When you consider that Miss Wills is just finishing her twenty-first year and that Mr. Jones is twenty-five, it is easy to prophesy that, barring accidents, these two phenomenal youngsters will go on winning tennis and golf tournaments for anywhere from a dozen to fifteen years longer.

That in itself is not unheard-of in sports. Witness such old war-horses as Ty Cobb and Jim Thorpe who played two of the hardest games in the world for a stretch of two decades. This included Jim's fifteen years of hard knocks as a professional football player and takes it for granted that he will still bob up on some pro team this fall, as he did last season, in spite of his farewell game in 1925. Others who ruled certain lines of athletics for seventeen years or more are Jay Gould, perennial court tennis champion, unbeaten for twenty years; Frank L. Kramer, king of cyclists for only three years short of two decades; and Willie Hoppe, who ruled the green baize, with the exception of one year, for the same length. Then there are others like Fitzsimmons, Zbyszko, Taylor, Wagner, and Milburn, who, while not always the best in their divisions, were close enough to the top year after year to prove their real greatness.

Helen Wills has now won five national titles— four American and one English. Her game was so superior to that of any other player in the recent United States championship that no one could win a set from her, and she lost only eighteen games in all to six opponents. Bobby Jones stood out even greater in winning the 1927 British open, when he led the field by 6 strokes and set a new record of 285, and in grabbing his third United States amateur crown, in which victory he was 29 up on such fine golfers as Harrison Johnston, Francis Ouimet, and Chick Evans. In these two tournaments, he played 152 consecutive holes in 598 strokes, ten of them under even 4's!

Yes, indeed, it appears that Helen and Bobby will reign for a long, long time!

Probabilities are that Walter Johnson, who has resigned from the Washington Senators, will be seen in a managerial role next season. Recently the big fellow requested an unconditional release from Clark Griffith's outfit and his request was honored. Paul Block, who purchased the Newark Internationals recently, hopes to sign Johnson as manager.

Harry Fuller of Niagara Falls defeated George Perotta in a six-round bout at Buffalo, according to an account written by Billy Kelly, sports editor of the Courier-Express. Perotta had Fuller wobbly several times from right crosses but in the sixth round Fuller sent Perotta down twice and this gave him the decision.

South of Youngstown had three scouts in the stands here Saturday and every play that was made by New Castle was marked down by the trio of Youngstown men. However, the Red and Black did not uncover everything they had in the first three periods when Dayton Steele proved duck-soup for the varsity and it was only in the last period that Dayton scored. Indications are that the only persons who will be in the city next Saturday will be those who cannot get away.

According to Joe Cumo, prospects for a second Emmett Rocco-Sandy Seifert bout are bright. Joe figures that he is entitled to the big end of the money for two reasons, first because Emmett defeated Seifert and second because Emmett draws the money at the gate. Rocco expects to stop the Pittsburgh blonde in another bout, if it materializes, and the writer believes it will.

State defeated Penn and West Virginia tied Lafayette in grid games Saturday. Carnegie lost to Washington & Jefferson and Pitt had no difficulty showing the route to Drake. Next Saturday the Plaid opposes Pitt and if their showings Saturday are criterions, Pitt should win.

In the eastern games Notre Dame emerged victorious over the Middies while Syracuse took a game from Georgetown. Yale downed Tus McLaughry's team from Brown and Harvard stepped along with a victory over Holy Cross. Army won from Davis and Elkins and Princeton vanquished Washington & Lee.

Post season deals are being arranged by baseball club owners, and Boston fans, like those of other cities where changes are apt to occur, would like to know who will replace Dave Bancroft, who is headed for Brooklyn. Bancroft will play short for the Dodgers and it looks as though the rest of the Dodgers' infield will be made up of Bissonette at first, Riconda at second and Freigau at third.

James Braid, who won the first of his five British golf championships more than a quarter of a century ago, and is now 57 years of age, gained a truly wonderful triumph the other day, when, on his own course at Walton Heath, he reached the final of match-play golf championship. In the face of a driving wind and rain the veteran kept his form in brilliant style.

Westminster Cross-Country Runners Lose

(Special To The News)

NEW WILMINGTON, Oct. 17.—Westminster's cross country team met its first defeat of the season last Saturday when it succumbed to the Allegheny college harriers 22-23 over the four and three quarter mile course at Meadville. The setback does by no means indicate poor running on the part of Coach R. X. Graham's proteges, for the meet was run over a strange course, many of the Blue and White squad losing the way in the early part of the race.

Minnis, an Allegheny runner, finished the course first and he was followed by Bentley another of Coach Hammett's men. Mirtz and Capt. "Wes" Rose, were the first Westminster harriers to complete the run, placing third and fourth respectively. Wlycoff who finished fifth for the Methodist's was given tough opposition by King, Blue and White runner who finished at his heels. Driblebiss and Kelly of Allegheny crossed the tape next cinching seventh and eighth positions. Ellis, Wallace and Perrine placed ninth, tenth and eleventh. Dean, another Meadville man finished 12th.

Coach Graham called a practice session for today and the Blue and White runners are determined to revenge the week end setback when they meet the Geneva college harriers in a return meet at Beaver Falls next Saturday.

In the second quarter Snyder ripped off two 50-yard runs for touchdowns, and Bessemer had a lead of 26 to 0 at the end of the first half.

Allegheny And Westminster Battle To No Score Tie In Great Game At Meadville

(Special To The News)

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Oct. 17.—Mixing a baffling forward pass attack with determined offensive play on the line, Westminster held Allegheny to a scoreless tie at the annual homecoming of the Methodists in Meadville Saturday. To pick the better team in this nip-and-tuck battle would be hard.

Westminster started poorly when Havrilla dropped the kickoff, but Johnny Hall, diminutive back, picked it up. Here the United Presbyterian signals got mixed up with the cheers of the 6,000 spectators, and after Dible, Westminster quarter, failed to impress his teammates with the right numbers, the Blue and White team was penalized five yards for taking too long with the mathematics.

Westminster Threatens

After an exchange of punts, Westminster again gained possession of the ball and after Dible and Hall gained 6 yards on end runs, McQuiston threw a long forward to Tweedie, Westminster end, who carried it more than 40 yards to the Allegheny 14-yard mark. Here the ball was lost on downs. Allegheny was too deep into its own territory to dare carry the ball, so Lusk punted to Dible who fumbled on the 48-yard line. Allegheny recovered the fumble, only to drop the ball on the next play with Hall recovering for Westminster. Hall then gained 8 yards on two plays, a forward was incomplete, and McQuiston punted over the goal line as the quarter ended.

With Forbes and Lusk carrying the ball, Allegheny made 9 yards on three downs, but elected to punt on the fourth to Dible. Here McQuiston's forward pass to Kelly, New Castle boy playing end for Westminster, was good for 11 yards and first down. But the Methodist line held firm, and after Westminster gained four yards, McQuiston booted the ball to the 30-yard mark. Two attempts at the line did not net the Meadville boys much ground, so they in turn punted to Dible who dropped the ball. Allegheny, ever alert, picked up the fumble, but lost the ball again after three attempts at the line and an incompleted forward.

Air Attack Good

Hall raced around end for five yards and on the next play caught a 20-yard forward pass from McQuiston for first down. In the meantime, the Allegheny team bolstered itself so that Westminster was forced to punt, McQuiston's kick traveling to the 15-yard mark. Nor could the Methodists gain much through the Titan forwards, necessitating a punt to midfield. Here, just before the half ended, McQuiston tried three forward passes without success., the last one being incompleted just as the whistle blew for the half.

Second Half Nip and Tuck

McQuiston, Westminster halfback, was easily the star of the game in punting and heaving forward passes. His educated toe booted the ball for an average of nearly 45 yards. One of the punts traveled over 60 yards.

The second half proved a replica of the first, only more so. McQuiston kicked off, the ball going to the Allegheny 10-yard mark. Merrit's men failed to gain and punted to McQuiston, who dropped the ball. Again the Allegheny forwards were on the alert and fell on it. But Allegheny fumbled in like manner to even matters up and Boone recovered for Westminster. McQuiston's forward to Hall was good for 18 yards and first down. When Allegheny threatened in the third period again, a fumble gave the ball to Westminster. Here again McQuiston's throw to Kelly was good for 22 yards and first down.

Allegeny soon got possession of the ball, only to have Hall intercept it and thus stave off another Methodist advance. Havrilla and Hall carried the ball for a first down. Hall and Dible romped around the ends for another first down.

Attempt Field Goal

In the fourth quarter, after Havrilla, Dible, and Hall had advanced the ball to the 40-yard mark, McQuiston tried a field goal, but it was wide of the uprights. Allegheny threatened when a forward pass, Lusk to Forbes, was good for 30 yards, but Dible intercepted the next pass from Merrit's men and the game ended as McQuiston threw a long pass to Hall for a 15 yard gain.

The defensive play of Boone, Westminster center; Havrilla, Blue and White fullback; and Kelly, end; and the backfield work of Hall, Dible, and McQuiston made the Westminster team look like an altogether different aggregation from the one which met St. Francis a week ago. On the other hand, Slaven, Allegheny end who is undoubtedly one of the best wingmen in the district; Forbes, Methodist fullback; and Lusk, halfback, made the going rough and hard for the United Presbyterians.

The lineup:

Westminster		Allegheny
Tweedie	R E	Slaven
Furno	R T	Kinnunen
Ayers	R G	Billings
Boone	C.	Behrhorst
Smith	L G	Jackson
Dombrowski	L T	Beach
Kelly	L E	Hughes
Dible	Q	Rowlingson
McQuiston	L H	Lusk
Hall	R H	Moon
Havrilla	F	Forbes

Substitutions—Westminster: Lauder for Dible, Sweet for Ayers, Dible for Lauder. Allegheny: Marnen for Forbes, McKay for Hughes, C. Behrhorst for Rowlingson, White for Marnen, Thompson for Lusk, Forbes for White, Hughes for McKay, Lusk for Thompson, Rowlingson for C. Behrhorst, McKay for Hughes, Thompson for Lusk.

Officials: Referee— Baird, Penn State. Umpire, Dewar, Pitt. Head Linesman, Williams, Buffalo.

GRID CAPTAINS

EMERSON NELSON — IOWA

The name Emerson W. Nelson, mentioned in connection with the grid doings at the University of Iowa, may not unleash any flood of football tales. But refer to Mr. Nelson as "Spike" and the floodgates will be opened.

Nelson, captain of this year's eleven, is probably one of the greatest linemen the west has produced. Two years ago he was rated as one of the two best tackles in the western football conference and mentioned for all-American team. Last fall he was an unanimous selection for all-American honors.

His home's in Cherokee, Ia.

Iowa played five conference games last fall and the results were as follows:

Iowa 6, Illinois 13.
Iowa 6, Ohio State 23.
Iowa 0, Minnesota 41.

Beaver Falls And Ellwood Battle To Tie Score 13 To 13

Teams Put Up Great Game At Ellwood City On Saturday.

Ellwood Hands Down Valley Lads Surprise Of Season.

(By TONY PASTA)

ELLWOOD CITY, Oct. 17.—Ellwood City and Beaver Falls High battled to 13-13 score Saturday in one of the hardest fought battles ever staged on Ellwood's grounds.

Beaver Falls was favored to win, outweighing Ellwood about eight pounds to a man.

Two of the valley team's men, Buck Nelle, flashy halfback and Warwood, a guard, were unable to play on account of studies while Ellwood was also minus the services of B. King, Lawrence, and Turner, at the beginning of the fray. King and Turner were sent in at the last quarter. Lawrence, quarterback, has been ill for sometime and his absence is keenly felt by his teammates.

Both teams played a hard game and everything seemed to be in Ellwood's favor after they had scored in the second quarter, neither team being able to cross the line in the first fifteen minutes of play. Justine crossed the line for the first touchdown, but failed to kick the goal. Beaver Falls was not able to make any points in the first half but returned strong in the beginning of the second half and Canish carried the ball over and also failed to kick making a tie score.

This was an important game for both teams as it meant the clinching of the Beaver Valley cup and a chance to get in the running for the W. P. I. A. L. trophy. Beaver Falls was favored to win and expected to do so but changed their minds in the very first few minutes of the battle. Time after time the valley eleven attempted to break through the Ellwood line but found a stone wall. An occasional end run netted much yardage but the passing combination, Canish to Garda proved disastrous to the Ellwood City eleven as the game was grasped from their hands when Beaver Falls tied the score with a pass over the goal line Canish to Garda and Canish kicking over for the extra point.

Play Well

Justine and MacMurdo played a wonderful game for Ellwood and J. King deserves creditable mention for paving the way for the second touchdown when he accepted a pass and ran almost 75 yards, Bill King taking it over the goal line. Justine was successful in kicking over for extra point after the second score and Ellwood took the lead 13-6. It seemed like a victory for Coach Lee's aggregation but in the last quarter a pass, Canish to Garda resulted in the tying of the contest. Ellwood outplayed the opponents and should have won by at least six points.

There was some dispute as to whether or not Garda was in bounds when he caught the pass which was fatal to the Ellwood eleven.

The largest crowd of the year attended the game with the valley team being well respesented. A band from each of the schools added spirit to the atmosphere which was ideal for a football game. Many Ellwood fans were anxious to see their team win as it would have probably meant an off season game with their keen rivals New Castle.

Coach Hecathorne's outfit was quite surprised in Ellwood's playing as Beaver Falls expected a rather easy victory. Hecathorne is assisted by Harold Kramer, who was assistant to Peck Lee at Ellwood in 1925 when he helped to turn out the W. P. I. A. L. champion eleven. From this game it could be seen that although outweighed the Ellwood City eleven outplayed their opponents. This was the most important game of the year for both teams. Next Saturday Ellwood will clash with Woodlawn at that place. Pictures of the Ellwood City-Beaver Falls game were taken.

Lineups:

Ellwood City		Beaver Falls
Maloney	L.E.	DeBunio
Duncan	L.T.	Wahl (Capt)
Welsh	L.G.	Walton
MacMurdo	C.	Seaburn
Mains(Capt).	R.G.	Gore
Brady	L.T.	Kruckenberg
J. King	R.E.	Weber
H. Slocum	Q.B.	Canish
Fanno	R.H.	Hendrickson
Haswell	L.H.	Garda
Justine	F.B.	Corbett

Officials—Fry, Pitt, referee; Todd, Geneva, umpire; Hoskins, Michigan, head linesman.

Substitutions—Ellwood City: Rutter for Brady, B. King for Slocum, Turner for J. King, Leibondofer for B. King. Beaver Falls: Steen for Hendrickson, Dunn for Seaburn, Weiner for Kruckenberg.

Touchdowns—Ellwood: Juntine, B. King. Beaver Falls: Canish, Garda.

Kicked over for extra point, Justine and Canish.

Failed to kick over for extra point, Justine, Kruckenberg.

Time of quarters—15 minutes.

Teams Deadlock

According to the scores made by the Beaver Valley football teams, Saturday must have been deadlock day as every team in the league played a tie game. The scores were as follows:

Ellwood City 13, Beaver Falls 13.
New Brighton 6, Rochester 6.
Woodlawn 7, Monaca 7.
Beaver 6, Freedom 6.

Beaver Falls and Ellwood City was the real classic contest with an enormous crowd present. No doubt one of these two teams will win the Beaver Valley title.

The most gigantic football score of recent years was Georgia Tech's 222-to-0 victory over Cumberland University in 1916.

drive down the field, using the forward pass to gain considerable yardage. Finally, with the ball on the 10-yard line Schubert uncorked a heave to Corbett and the fleet Dayton quarterback weaved his way to the goal line. Schubert added the extra point for the visitors on a placement kick. The game ended soon after the Dayton boys had secured their touchdown.

Daum, Schubert and Allen were the best performers for the Dayton team in the backfield. This trio found the New Castle high line a tartar and while they ripped off a few nice gains, were sotpped time and time again. On the line the playing of Clendenning and Scott featured for the visitors, with Stout also putting up a nice game.

The entire New Castle high line played brilliant football, and it would be hard to select any of the individual stars on the forward wall.

The lineup and summary:

New Castle 38		Dayton Steele 7
Ostrosky	L.E.	Williams
Cuba	L.T.	Clendenning
Mike	L.G.	Nolan
Thomas	C.	Stout
A. Mooney	R.G.	Hoke
Alexander	R.T.	Scott
Craft	R.E.	Riley
Reider	Q.B.	Allen
Sillman	R.H.	Blackwell
Richards	L.H.	Schubert
Harper	F.B.	Daum

Score by quarters:

New Castle	0	13	6	19	—38
Dayton Steele	0	0	0	7	— 7

Touchdowns—New Castle: Reider 2, Sillman, Turk, Harper, Sage; Dayton Steele: Corbett (sub for Allen).

Points after touchdown—New Castle 2 out of 6, Dayton 1 out of 1.

Substitutions—New Castle: Turk, Dinsmore, Beres, Howley, Weaver, Sage, Fernati, Dufford, Farrow, Hannon, Smith, A. Alexander, Kulich, Harris, H. Mooney, Shultz, Ciccone. Dayton Steele: Kanaga, Haus, Bauer, Corbett, Lloyd, Hart, Martin.

Referee—McCullough (Gettysburg). Umpire—McClure (W. & J.) ..... Head linesman—Blum (Pittsburgh). Time of quarters—12 minutes. Attendance—6,000.

BUCCANEERS TO STAGE PRACTICE

The East Side Buccaneers will hold an important practice session at the Ben Franklin field annex on Tuesday night at 5 o'clock, according to an announcement today from Manager Frank Baptiste.

The Buccaneers have secured William Hammil and William Sands, former New Castle high stars, to coach them this season. Sands is also a former Westminster College grid luminary.

Anyone wishing to tryout for the team are asked to get in touch with Mr. Baptiste by calling 1110-W any time in the afternoon or evening, and before reporting at the field.

The Buccaneers would like to arrange games with the following teams: Croton, South Side Bulldogs, Colored Stars, Penn-State Auto Service, Smith Cleaners, and all other fast independent teams in the city or county.

Scull Of Pennsy Bids For Fame

By JACK SORDS

It's a safe bet even at this early date to jot down Paul Scull, Pennsylvania's husky little halfback, as one of the season's outstanding stars.

Scull put an end to Brown university's reign as leader in eastern football circles by scoring all of his team's points against the Providence eleven.

It was the first defeat in 14 games for Brown, the school that rose to unusual heights last year by a brand of football never attained before at the institution. And it has turned out some mighty fine teams

Scull is fast and squirmy and a good defensive man, ever alert to take advantage of an opponent's misplays. His toe is one of his deadliest weapons. That was shown last year when he booted the field goals that beat both Columbia and Penn State 3 to 0, and tied Cornell, 10 to 10.

Scull has played six years of football in college and high school and experienced only one defeat, that to Illinois by a field goal.

Besides Paul, opposing teams have another Scull to contend with in Folwell, a brother, who seems destined to become a fine defensive player.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

By NORMAN E. BROWN

With the football season just under way several teams have given due warning of a powerful driving attack that bids fair to carry them thrcugh to a successful season, regardless of the opposition.

Dartmouth, always possessed of a great or nearly-great team and always proud of a great offensive team, ran up a total of 131 points in its first three games—Norwich, Hobart and Allegheny.

Lafayette scored 133 points against 20 in its first three battles, including Muhlenberg and Rutgers.

Georgetown came within 44 points of the 200 mark in three battles. Vanderbilt, always a leading contender in the southern sector, rolled up 137 points against 37.

Minnesota, slated to win the Western College conference title, scored 97 points in its two contests with the Dakotas—North and South.

Carnegie Tech, which startled the football world last fall by trouncing Notre Dame, has started out like a whirlwind, scoring 123 points and holding the entire opposition to 6 points.

Northwestern, picked to give Minnesota a battle for the Big Ten honors, faced South Dakota and Utah in its first two games and ran up 60 points while holding the two teams to 8 points.

Pittsburgh, playing Grove City, Thiel and the stronger West Virginia team, ran up 121 points while keeping its goal line clear.

While many teams were enjoying scoring orgies, however, some of the most dignified elevens in the country were suffering defeats. Numbered among these latter ones were Harvard, Yale and Colgate. Yale's defeat at the hands of Georgia put the southland into a state bordering on delirium. I have a telegram on my desk, sent by Gordon W. Chambers, Augusta, Ga., and one of Georgia U.'s big boosters. Said telegram is a song of joy over the victory.

Purdue university, early mentioned as a threat in the Big Ten, can coast along gloriously all season, whatever else befalls the team, on the strength of the startling victory over Harvard.

And Colgate will smart a long time under the defeat handed it by Virginia Poly.

The general trend of events on the college grids to date points to a hectic season, in which some of the teams are going to continue to run wild—and some are going to take an awful drubbing when they least expect it.

The latter class may include Knute Rockne's Notre Dame team.

In winning two out of three Port Chester marathons "Whitey" Michelson, the Stamford plumber, has stamped himself as one of the best long distance runners in America.

The billiard match between Champion Welker Cochran and Young Jake Schaefer for the world's 18.2 balkline title is expected to take place in New York about the middle of December.

Pitt-Princeton Not Scored On

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Gaston B. Means, former federal investigator, has been recommended for parole by the Federal Parole board which met in Atlanta last week, it was announced at the Justice department today. His sentence, a total of four years for dry law violations, would have ex- ed next June.

He was an important witness in the Senate's investigation of Harry M. Daugherty's administration of the department of justice.

It is understood that the board has also recommended a parole for Earl Carroll, New York theatrical producer, but no report on Carroll has thus far been received by the department.

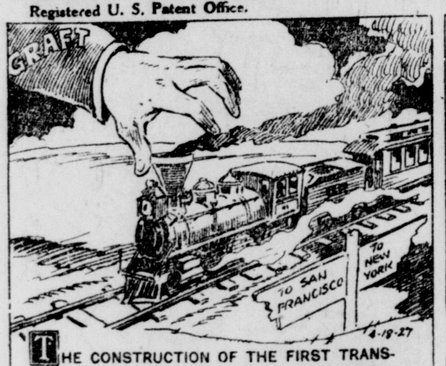
HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

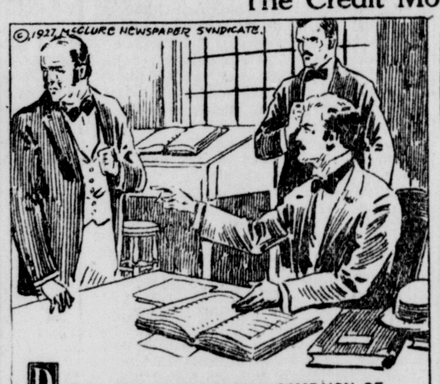
The Credit Mobilier Scandal.

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

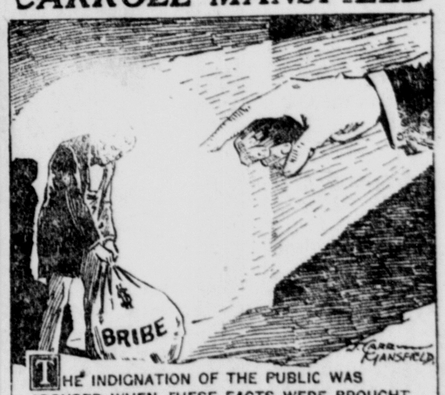


THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE FIRST TRANS-CONTINENTAL RAILWAY, LINKING THE EAST WITH THE PACIFIC COAST, HAD BEEN TAINTED WITH CORRUPTION. THE LINE HAD BEEN COMPLETED IN 1869 WITH THE AID OF VAST GOVERNMENT GRANTS. MEANWHILE, THE INTERESTS OF THE RAILROAD HAD BEEN ASSUMED BY A CORPORATION, CHARTERED IN PENNSYLVANIA, KNOWN AS THE CREDIT MOBILIER.



DURING THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN OF 1872 IT WAS CHARGED THAT REPUBLICAN CONGRESSMEN WERE MIXED UP IN A RAILROAD SCANDAL. INVESTIGATING COMMITTEES FOUND THAT THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE CREDIT MOBILIER HAD BEEN RECEIVING EXCESSIVE PROFITS.

IT WAS FURTHER DISCLOSED THAT LEADERS OF THE COMPANY HAD ALLOWED A NUMBER OF CONGRESSMEN AND HIGH GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS TO BUY STOCKS FAR BELOW THEIR REAL VALUE, WITH THE INTENTION OF INFLUENCING THE VOTES AND SUPPORT OF THESE PURCHASERS IN FAVOR OF THE COMPANY.



THE INDIGNATION OF THE PUBLIC WAS AROUSED WHEN THESE FACTS WERE BROUGHT TO LIGHT, AND AS A RESULT TWO CONGRESSMEN WERE CENSURED, AND THE PUBLIC CAREERS OF SEVERAL POLITICIANS WERE BLASTED.

N. Y. STOCKS

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Industrial stocks gravitated to a lower range of prices at the beginning of trading today as the result of a considerable influx of selling orders over the week-end. Liquidations was based chiefly on the failure of many important divisions of American business to measure up to expectations, and the realization that "cheap money" cannot sustain a bull market indefinitely.

Heavy short selling of United States Steel, Remington Rand, Mack Truck and other speculative favorites, as well as a wide varity of the independent oils, resulted in a sharp revision of the trend of prices, as contrasted with the upturn in the last three sessions of last week. United States Steel lost more than a point in the first period, while General Motors was down 2, Du Pont down 3, and Houston Oil 4. A few of the pool specialties responded to the stimulus of aggressive buying, and railroad stocks in the Nickel Plate group reached a slightly higher price level.

Col. Smith Speaks At Rotary Meeting

Rev. G. A. Leichliter And Peter Quartel Also On Day's Program

Col. LeRoy Smith, of Los Angeles, Cal., gave a most interesting and informative address today at noon at the weekly luncheon of the New Castle Rotary Club, held in the Fountain Inn dining room.

Col. Smith of the Officers Reserve Corps was introduced to the club by Captain Melvin L. Craig. In speaking of "Peace Organization," he showed that in all the wars of our country we have never faced an enemy as large as we were. And that if we had made an enemy equal in strength to ourselves we would have been defeated because of the lack of preparation.

Rev. G. A. Leichliter, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Peter Quartel, famous tenor singer of Dayton, Ohio, sang two religious selections for the club. They are in the city in connection with the special services being held by the City Mission in the Central Presbyterian church this week.

On next Monday noon, October 24, Pedro M. Blanco, a native Philippino, who is a graduate of Columbia University, and took a year post graduate work in Oxford University, England, will address the Rotary Club on the subject, "Should the Philippines Be Given Their Independence."

Pouring Of Concrete Started On Edenburg Road This morning

Pouring of concrete was started on the Edenburg road this morning according to the Woods and Golder Construction company of New Castle who have the contract for the construction of this new improved highway which will connect Edenburg with New Castle.

The portion of the road that is to be improved is about two miles long and extends from Parkstown on the New Castle-Youngstown road to the top of the hill above the railroad tracks in Edenburg.

Unusual progress has been made on the construction of the road up until last week on account of the fine weather this fall.

Last week's rains hindered the work a little as it was hoped to have started the pouring of concrete a week ago. But with a good average weather it is likely that the concrete will be all finished within a month and thus the road will be opened before winter.

Approve New Five Cent Fare On Harmony Line

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 17.—The Public Service Commission has approved the inauguration of a five-cent fare, affecting local community service on the Harmony Route and Butler Short Line. The new rate will be put into effect on October 20, 1927.

The new fare which will apply between distinctly local stations is the result of the development of the various communities along the lines of the company, according to a statement of the railway officials.

Coupon books in the form of 25-cent, 50-cent and $1.00 deniminations will be sold which may be utilized as well in other fare points. These books will be good until used.

Levine Reaches New York City, Given Welcome

IS ENTHUSIASTIC OVER MAIL SERVICE

Plans Return To Europe Next Summer To Attempt Flight To United States.

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Charles Levine, the first trans-Atlantic airplane passenger, who made the flight to Germany with Clarence Chamberlin, returned home today on the liner Leviathan and was given a cordial, yet dignified, reception by the city of New York and an enthusiastic welcome by his friends and admirers.

The band played "The Star Spangled Banner" and Levine was warmly applauded as he was transferred from the liner to the city's reception boat, the Macom, which steamed up the harbor to welcome officially the Don Quixote of aviation.

Levine was extremely modest in talking to newspaper reporters who questioned him concerning his adventures. He minimized his part in the achievement.

Air Mail Business.

"I intend to go into the trans-Atlantic air mail business within the next few years" Levine said. "I think a daily mail service to Europe is feasible."

He said it would be some years before passenger service across the Atlantic is established. For one thing, he said, the rates would be prohibitive, for it would cost passengers from $2500 to $3,000 each to make the trip.

He was enthusiastic, however, about the mail service, asserting that a forty hour service between this country and Europe could be established at a cost of about fifty cents a letter.

Mrs. Grace Levine, his wife, and his 9-year old daughter, Aloyce, were aboard the Macom when it met the Leviathan. They went aboard the liner and rushed up to the aviator and kissed him repeatedly.

"I am so happy" exclaimed Mrs. Levine.

Levine, who surprised her by jumping into the plane with Chamberlain at the last moment and flying to Europe told her he was glad to get back home. Levine brought back with him a wire hair terrier, "Paddy" which he presented to Aloyce. She and the dog immediately became friends.

While being interviewed coming down the bay Levine was asked by a correspondent for a Polish newspaper.

"Is it true that while in Poland you denied that you were a Jew?"

"Why should I?" Levine answered.

"Were you born in America?" Mr. Levine."

"I was born in North Adams, Mass.—on St. Patrick's day." Levine replied with a grin.

SENATOR FESS DECLARES PARTY WANTS COOLIDGE

That the Republican party wants Calvin Coolidge for its candidate in the next election, and despite the president's statement that "He does not choose to run," may still offer him the nomination, declared Simeon D. Fess of Ohio at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

It will be remembered that Senator Fess was the main speaker of Thursday evening's meeting of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School association, which was held in the Scottish Rite cathedral.

If the party deadlocks at the next National Republican convention, they will turn unanimously to the president to lead it through the next election. The president will not refuse, the senator thinks.

The Ohio delegation will go to the next national convention anxious to vote for Coolidge, says the senator. If, after a few ballots are taken and no other candidate seems to have an unmistakable chance of winning the nomination, the senator believes that some delegation, perhaps that of Ohio, will start a demand for Coolidge that will sweep the convention, and end in the nomination being given to him.

"President Coolidge is entirely sincere when he says that he does not choose to run," avers Senator Fess, who long has been a close friend of the president. "He has told me that he feels ten years of the presidency is too much for any man. He is looking forward, I am sure, to March 3, 1929, when he can retire. But the American people want him to keep on being president. The Republican party wants him to keep on.

"With my knowledge of Governor Alfred Smith," said the senator, "I know that he is a strong man and a political leader to be reckoned with. But I do not see that he has a chance of being elected to the presidency, particularly if Coolidge is his opponent."

The Senator declined to discuss the possibilities of Ohio's two candidates, Longworth and Willis, in the next presidential race.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative mixed with olive oil.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Smile Nicely

New way restores "off-color" teeth to clearness quickly

DON'T think your teeth are naturally off-color and dull. You can restore them to amazing whiteness in a new way dentists advise.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel a film. A slippery coating that covers them, hides their color and invites tooth and gum troubles. Ordinary pastes and dentifrices won't successfully remove it.

That is why, in old days, so many smiles were ruined by ugly teeth and toneless gums. Now, thanks to modern science, there is a way to combat that film.

Just obtain a tube of the dentifrice called Pepsodent at your druggist's. Clear off that film tonight; clear white teeth are beautiful. Note then the amazing difference in your smile. You'll be thankful for the suggestion. For thus you can change your whole appearance.

Acid in Stomach Ruins Appetite

Thin, pale people—the despondent sort who never have an appetite, and complain of headaches, indigestion, dizziness, biliousness, usually have too much acid in their stomach. And unless they displace it, any food they eat turns into sour bile and foul gases, which poison their system.

Pape's Diapepsin dissolves that poisonous acid, sweetens the stomach and digests your meals. Many thousands of people have brought back the appetite of their youth and gained weight simply by chewing one of the pleasant tablets of Pape's Diapepsin after meals.

It does what it promises. That's the reason 5 million packages are used a year—ask your nearest druggist for it.

Roaming Round With Richards

Some News, Some Views, But Mostly Just Observations Of Interesting Things Around New Castle.

How many of you noticed the sky Sunday evening? Between five-thirty and six-fifteen it was an art gallery, a display that no earthly artist could hope to equal, a huge canvas that compelled attention.

One could imagine all sorts of picture combinations. For a time it looked as though some giant hand had painted a woodland scene. Great masses of bushy trees, painted in grey and purple and then shading off into all the tints of those colors. Here and there litle patches of emerald showed through and to one side it looked as though a wind had caught up a pot of gold and orange and swept it into a careless daub streaked and patched.

Farther back there seemed to be a river of gold rushing through a woods with the golden tipped waves cascading over the banks. And then as a frame for the whole thing there was an area of pinks and yellows and blues blended so skilfully that one could not tell where one shade began and the other left off.

Looking at scenes like that is a sure cure for egotism. Just gazing at such a sky gives one a feeling that after all the human being is rather inconsequential, that all of us have such a minor part in the great scheme of things that we can ill afford to be egotistic. And too, one has a feeling of being closer to the infinite, in the presence of such ethereal beauty.

That was a peculiar mistake, if mistake it was at the football game Saturday. Apparently Dayton Steel had five downs in one series of plays, or at least the fans in my section thought they had. Umpire McClure insisted between the halves that there had been but four downs. Ed. Gaesa, who flashes the downs and yardage to the score board said there had been five. Either one of them may be right, but thus far no one has been able to prove either side of the argument. Following the alleged fifth down the crowd gave the officials the well known raspberry which doesn't seem to be quite the thing to do. The officials brought here for the games are honest, but like the rest of us are prone to err. Over a season the errors will balance themselves and the home team will get just as even a break as the visiting team. The demonstration at this point in the game didn't help any in giving us a reputation for fair play, and while we all have the urge to pan a bad decision, yet in the interests of sportsmanship wouldn't it be just as well if we left unsaid those things we want to say?

Hope you have been noticing the nice things that are being said about Alec Fox, guard on the Pitt football team. Alec is making good on this years team, one of the best Pitt has had in years. All the luck this colyum wishes him is that he makes All-American in 1928. This is by way of nominating him for the honor.
